Youth curfew passed

Threats to council are revealed

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE CARMEL CITY Council has passed an ordinance prohibiting persons 17 and younger from wandering in public places after 11 p.m.

The vote Monday, Oct. 13, was 3-2.

Councilmen Howard Brunn and Frank Lloyd were opposed.

The issue was raised and adopted at the first council meeting in September, then rescinded at the next session. The council squelched the curfew ordinance during the second reading with a 2-2 vote, with Councilmen Helen Arnold and Brunn opposed. Lloyd was absent.

The council requested that the measure be re-introduced when all members were present.

Lloyd, whose tie-breaking vote was missed at the September meeting, said that after talking to youths and adults he decided that a curfew was not needed. The reason for a curfew is to protect the innocent from trouble-makers, he said.

Brunn then asked that the ordinance be tabled until it was needed.

HOWEVER, POLICE Chief William Ellis told the council that two days after the ordinance passed in September, certain council members received threatening phone calls. He said that the home of one Scenic Road resident, who complained of noise from youths, was firebombed and she received several threats on her life.

Curfew is a tool to work with the youngsters in Carmel, Ellis said, then noted that most trouble-makers are from outside Carmel.

Because Carmel does not have a curfew, youngsters "can wander all night long if they wish," he said.

Ellis said there have been problems lately at Devendorf Park and noise has continued

Sand castle contest is this Sunday

Carmel residents, breathe a sigh of relief and call those out-of-town friends who already have their buckets and shovels packed, waiting to hear.

Tell them the 19th annual Great Sand Castle Contest of Carmel is Sunday, Oct. 19.

Yes, the cat is finally out of the bag. Since the light-hearted event was founded in 1961, crowds have grown so large that the date is now announced only a few days ahead. Crowd estimates for this year's event range from 5,000 to 10,000.

The tide is expected to recede until 12:56 p.m., providing contestants with several hours of moldable, wet morning sand to build sturdy foundations before judging begins at 2 p.m.

Castle constructors will also be relieved to know that high tide will be at 7:14 p.m., allowing several hours for the sandcastles to stand before the ocean slowly takes them away.

Grand Sand Marshall Jim Hommes said the theme of the contest this year is Architecture Then, Now and Forever, and

More money is found for cultural organizations

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE CARMEL CITY COUNCIL nearly emptied its pockets when it granted an additional $14,750 to cultural organizations at its meeting Monday, Oct. 13.

The council unanimously endorsed two requests that will add $5,000 to the Carmel Bach Festival grant of $9,000 and give $750 to the Cypressaires, a Monterey Peninsula barbershop singing group.

A request from the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art for a one-time $5,000 grant for its building fund was granted 3-2, with Councilmen Helen Arnold and Howard Brunn opposed.

The grants cut sharply into the city contingency fund for fiscal 1980-81. Raises for

This truck was parked at Mission and Sixth one day last week while making a delivery. Protruding over the crosswalk and onto Mission Street, the truck inconvenienced pedestrians and motorists. City Administrator Doug Peterson said the City of Carmel has no special regulations on the size of delivery trucks.

Alternate route to Hatton Canyon freeway sought

REITERATING THEIR OPPOSITION to a freeway through Hatton Canyon, Carmel City Council members voted unanimously to urge a state transportation study that would investiga.e alternative plans.

The decision Monday, Oct. 13, precedes a meeting of the State Transportation Commission scheduled Oct. 22 in Monterey County.

Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck talked earlier with council members and City Administrator Doug Peterson about the city opposition to construction of a freeway.

She told council members that the state has money for several studies and may consider focusing on the canyon if the City Council gives it the go-ahead.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said that though a freeway is opposed, there is no opposition to a scenic route through the canyon for northbound traffic and use of Highway 1 for southbound traffic. Councilman Howard Brunn and Mayor Barney Laiolo agreed.

Brunn said that though he has been quoted as saying "let the cars back up to Big Sur" in his opposition to a freeway, he does not oppose a study of alternative methods for routing traffic.

Noting that the congestion on Highway 1 south of the proposed freeway was not addressed by the council, Councilman Mike Brown said that the Hatton Canyon project has a low priority with the state at this time.

Museum plans given a boost by council grant

THE FIRST STEP towards a Carmel historical museum was taken Monday, Oct. 13, when the City Council approved a request from the nonprofit group Carmel Tomorrow to fund a study to determine the museum's feasibility.

The council voted unanimously to grant $1,950 to the Carmel organization.

Dr. George Faul, former president of Monterey Peninsula College and executive secretary of Carmel Tomorrow, said, "What our group feels is that much of this (Carmel heritage) would be lost forever if we do not find a way of recapturing and bringing it into focus.

"What we are proposing is that we take a look at developing a historic museum for Carmel."

He noted that there are many older people in Carmel who have artifacts and memorabilia that would contribute to understanding Carmel, but there is no place to display a collection.

In a letter to the council, Carmel Tomorrow suggested that a museum be incorporated in the proposed library annex. Faul emphasized that the group does not want the annex construction delayed by the proposal.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said the curator of the Oakland Museum said paintings by early Carmel artists would be loaned to the City of Carmel if there were a museum to house them.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said he would like a combined effort with the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Carmel Tomorrow, established in 1978, is a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping the city preserve its heritage and charm.

Council approves home construction on Scenic Road

A LETTER ORDERED drafted by the Carmel City Council one week earlier that would have delayed construction of a home at Scenic and Eighth until the Carmel Local Coastal Program is approved was rescinded when the council met Monday, Oct. 13.

The vote was 4-1, with Councilman Mike Brown opposed.

The property, owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, has a one-story home on it.

Designed by architect David Smith, the proposed home was initially rejected by the Regional Coastal Commission, which recommended that the 22-foot height be lowered to meet the tentative guidelines of the LCP. The Carmel LCP is to be reviewed in December or early 1981.

The architect lowered the height to 18 feet above the property grade. However, neighbors complained that the view would be partially blocked and the building out of character with the neighborhood.

Jim Heisinger, an attorney representing residents along Scenic and San Antonio, told the council that his clients supported the letter drafted by the city staff asking that the commission delay approval until the building code ordinance for beach-related properties was reviewed.

"My clients find it incompatible in the area," he said.

Councilman Howard Brunn told Heisinger, "It appears to me it is a real asset to the community and a real asset to Carmel" because of its design.

Heisinger replied, "Your personal opinion that this is an asset to the community might not be shared by the city."

NOLAN KENNEDY, who represents the property owner, said the lot has been in the Smith family 40 years. He noted that the house was described by the architect as a restrained Bay area traditional style modeled after a Carmel home.

He said the architect reduce the square footage of the home from 1,677 square feet to 1,576 square feet to meet demands made by the Coastal Commission and neighbors.

In the area, there are 15 two-story homes, 12 one-story homes with garages underneath and one three-story home, according to Kennedy.

"We're trying to do everything we can to build a house to be proud of and at the same time give Mr. Smith maximum use of the property," he said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said the architect and owner had "leaned over backward to design a house that won't interfere with the viewshed."

Referring to a house on San Antonio owned by Edith Briggs, Mrs. Arnold said, "I don't find the place objectionable because Mrs. Briggs will still be able to see over the house."

Noting that many homes in Carmel have been overbearing, Brown said the letter stated that the city would like to reconsider its building code ordinance.

However, Kennedy objected to delays because of escalating building costs. "We're not talking about a sprawling development. It is just one house," he said.

Mrs. Briggs told the council that her view would not be dramatically impeded. She said it was the neighbors who live at an angle who would have their views blocked.

Marilyn Terry, a Carmel resident, said that though she does not live on Scenic, the architect did not consider the neighbors on San Antonio.

In five to 10 years, homes on Scenic will be 1½ to two stories, she said. "Then my friends, you have a La Jolla and a Newport Beach and real estate soaring," Mrs. Terry said.

Before the motion to rescind the letter was made, Brown warned, "The fact that we're not dealing with Scenic as a whole is a mistake."

The scene at Sunset Center was definitely one of spray, as many of the several hundred spectators got wet during the events.

Muster means wet

The west parking lot at Sunset Center swarmed with firemen, fire trucks, hoses and spectators Sunday, Oct. 12. The occasion was, happily, not a fire but an old-fashioned firemen's muster. The muster started with a parade of fire trucks down Ocean Avenue and included competitions between fire departments from Carmel, Pacific Grove, Spreckels, Monterey, Castroville, the County Service Areas, the Naval Postgraduate School and the Monterey Airport. It may become an annual event. Winners of the hose cart race were (1st) Monterey, (2nd) County Service Areas and (3rd) Pacific Grove; bucket brigade (1st) Monterey, (2nd) Carmel and (3rd) County Service Areas; make and break contest (1st) Castroville, (2nd) County Service Areas and (3rd) Monterey Airport; water polo (1st) Monterey, (2nd) Pacific Grove and (3rd) Monterey Airport. The Castroville crew won the Bent Nozzle award for its mishaps. Spreckels won the sportsmanship award, and Monterey won an award for the most points overall.

Dogs retain their freedom in residential district

By JOANNE HODGEN

DOGS KEPT THEIR RIGHT to roam free in the residential district after a Carmel City Council decision to table a proposed leash law ordinance.

The council voted unanimously to take no action on the issue at its meeting Monday, Oct. 13.

Currently, a leash law is enforced in the business district only.

The issue, introduced at the council meeting Sept. 8, was continued because Councilman Frank Lloyd, who asked that the item be placed on the agenda, was absent.

Lloyd noted two recent cases when Carmel residents were attacked by loose dogs. One person was bitten twice in each leg, he said, which later became infected.

The dog, Lloyd said, was penned for 10 days and "put back out on the streets."

Police Chief William Ellis said that according to police records, in the past nine months there have been 13 dog bites reported, two complaints of vicious dogs and three dogs killed by automobiles.

Ellis estimated that passage of the ordinance would cost the city $10,000 to $12,000 for a larger animal control vehicle and additional holding pens.

He asked that the council postpone enforcement until January 1981 to give dog owners more time to prepare restraints for their pets.

However, Ellis panned the idea as unenforceable. Leash laws are currently on the books in other Monterey Peninsula municipalities and in the county.

"Do you ever see dogs running loose in the county?" Ellis asked. "They can't enforce it."

Stanley Page, a Carmel resident, said that though he does not own a dog he is opposed to a leash law because it interferes with "our simple form of life we have here."

"I see very few dog problems. I also think that if an ordinance is enacted it would be an expensive ordinance to enforce," Page said.

In other council action:

■ Mrs. Richard Mack of Carmel asked the council to pass a resolution asking for an Environmental Impact Study for Carmel to determine the effects of the Big Sur Coastal Act.

The council had asked that the House of Representatives enact a freeze on legislation until an EIS was completed.

U.S. Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, who introduced the bill, told the council there was no process to get an EIS at this stage.

Mrs. Mack said there is a process to enact a freeze during the lame-duck session of Congress in November.

The council agreed to review the issue at its first meeting in November.

■ The Local Agency Formation Commission request to Carmel for $500 and participation in a proposed fire study was granted, minus the funding.

The council voted 4-1, with Mike Brown opposed, to participate in the study without financial support.

County fire districts were required by the county Board of Supervisors to participate in the project or forfeit bailout funds.

Fire Chief Bob Updike and City Administrator Doug Peterson recommended participation in the study and approval of the contribution.

Lloyd said, "Apparently these areas are opposed to paying their fair share (fire fees) and now they're coming to Carmel for a handout."

Brown noted that Pacific Grove agreed to participate in the project without paying a fee. However, he said he supported a study and wanted full Carmel participation.

■ An ordinance that expands and clarifies the definition of a building site in the zoning code was unanimously approved.

The council also unanimously adopted an ordinance regulating lot splits.

The ordinance, which Peterson said was carried out informally in the past, will establish rules for dividing lots that do not qualify as subdivisions.

■ Carmel residents and businesswoman Marilyn Terry asked that the Piccadilly nursery site, recently acquired by the city, be cleaned up.

The council told her that the construction of a fence or a month-to-month tenant to maintain the property is under consideration.

She said later that it has been three weeks since nearby merchants asked the council to clean the site. Because of litter tourists often avoid the immediate area thus hurting walk-in trade for business, she said.

Mrs. Terry said merchants are signing a poster that will be hung at the lot protesting the mess. She said the poster states: "Attention members of the Carmel City Council. We the undersigned merchants of Dolores Street request that these premises be cleaned on a daily basis."

Contingency fund is cut; cultural groups are funded

the Carmel Fire and Police departments drained the fund of $32,000, according to Carmel Finance Officer Jim Bajari.

The contingency fund, which covers unexpected costs during the fiscal year, now has $5,250.

"WHAT WE DO is make a budget and try to live within it," Bajari said during a break at the meeting. He said if the remaining money is spent, the council would have to pass an ordinance calling for additional expenditures, which takes two readings.

Howard Bucquet, treasurer of the Bach Festival, said that the $9,000 grant recommended by the Carmel Cultural Commission would not equal ticket receipts collected by the city for rent. He said the city took $14,200, or 10 percent, of the gross ticket sales as reimbursement for room rentals at Sunset Center.

"We're asking that our rent be returned to us in the form of a grant from the city," he said.

The council at one time granted rent-free rooms to nonprofit organizations at Sunset Center. To make the policy more equitable to other groups, the council agreed to charge rent equally, then reimburse organizations through grants.

Cultural Commissioner Bernard Van Horne said that the commission recommends grants based on criteria drawn up by the members.

Criteria included the extent of the group's activities in the community and whether the group's actions contribute to the cultural climate of the community.

The commission did not recommend a grant for the Cypressaires because of a misunderstanding, according to Van Horne. The commission understood that the money was to replace clothing worn while performing, which it considered a capital improvement, according to a commission memo.

Funds raised for charitable organizations were thought to be allocated by the Cypressaires' parent association to an out-of-state charity, the memo continued.

However, Bryan Epps, speaking for the organization, said money was needed for a musical director and a practice hall.

He noted that the group controls its charitable activities and plans to contribute money for equipment to aid deaf and hard-of-hearing children in Carmel schools. "Members have donated out-of-pocket in the past," he said.

He said gate receipts netted the city $500 at a concert in November 1979.

ARCHITECT OLAF DAHLSTRAND, a member of the building committee for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, said the museum has grown too large for its present building.

A proposed addition will cost $500,000, he said. The museum is more than half way to its building goal. Because many Carmel residents are members of the organization and the museum serves all residents, he asked the city to donate $5,000 to the building fund.

Brunn and Mrs. Arnold agreed that the city should not finance the construction.

"I feel the group is as worthy as any is. It is not a Carmel group. I feel we should be looking at the establishment of our own museum in Carmel," Brunn said.

Council backs plan to study a 'small' dam

THE CARMEL CITY Council endorsed a proposed study for a new dam next to the existing San Clemente Dam at its meeting Monday, Oct. 13.

Ed Lee, a member of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board, received unanimous support from the council in his effort for a study of a 19,000-acre-foot dam.

He asked that a letter be drafted stating that the California-American Water Co. plan to block the small dam will not be an effective growth-control mechanism.

In a letter to Councilman Howard Brunn, he said, "Cal-Am has the power to condemn off-stream reservoir sites and has plans under way to do so." He said the plan would be of no benefit to Carmel Valley.

According to Lee, the best solution to water supply problems is to build a small dam and use it in conjunction with the existing wells in Carmel Valley.

There is also more water available in the aquifer which will not be tapped by the four new wells, Lee said.

Earlier, he urged the Lower Carmel Advisory Committee to encourage the water management district to give voters the opportunity to vote on a small- or medium-size dam at the San Clemente site on the Carmel River.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association voted 2-1 to pursue a dam at that site, Lee said.

Lee said that the size of the dam would determine the growth of Carmel Valley.

If a larger dam is not built, Lee said Cal-Am will continue drilling more wells in Carmel Valley.

"I think everybody who reads the newspapers knows of the damage caused by wells," he said, referring to the slow death of vegetation along the Carmel River.

A dam, he said, can restore the damaged vegetation in Mid-Carmel Valley by creating a year-round flow. "Supply would exceed demand and help in regrowth of vegetation," according to Lee.

He said to control growth in Carmel Valley he would recommend a smaller dam that would increase the existing water supply by 50 percent. A larger dam, he said, would supply 2½ times the water.

Benefits of the dam would be increased domestic and municipal supplies, preservation and enhancement of wildlife and ground water recharge, Lee said.

He estimated the current cost of a smaller 19,000-acre-foot dam would be $19.24 million.

Councilman Mike Brown noted that some people feel future developments should carry the cost.

Lee said it would cost existing homeowners very little because new homes would pay a connection charge to pay interest and loans on the dam during a 30-year period at 10 percent.

At a one percent growth rate in Carmel Valley, hook-ups would cost $6,341; costs would be $4,227 per hookup at a 1½ percent growth rate, Lee said.

He said compared to a real estate agent's fees, the charges are relatively low.

The cost of dam construction could be offset by using existing silt now in the San Clemente dam in construction, he said.

Curfew ordinance passed in Carmel past midnight on Scenic Road.

Brunn said he was not threatened and was not aware of other threats when he voted against the curfew.

"I would not be against the ordinance if I thought the city staff had exhausted ways to work with youth of Carmel," he said. "I do not believe we have."

Mrs. Arnold, who changed her vote, said she conducted an informal survey on the beach, asking local youngsters if they objected to a curfew.

One boy, she said, stated that there would be no problems for "we can live with it or live without it."

Mrs. Arnold said, "If we have a curfew it will be aimed at kids outside of Carmel. Local kids have a tendency to behave themselves."

Pacific Grove and the unincorporated areas have a curfew. Monterey and Seaside are considering it.

The curfew would become effective Nov. 12, 30 days after its first reading, if it is approved by the council at its second reading Nov. 3. It would prohibit persons 17 and younger from being on the streets between 11 p.m. and daybreak unless accompanied by a parent or guardian or unless on a legitimate errand.

She took a balloon ride . . almost

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THERE'S A FEW CLOUDS in the coffee this week — and it's a rather nice feeling.

The fog rolls in and the scent of wood smoke drifts through the village, creating a warm, cozy feeling — as Carmelites enjoy a continuous round of social events and exciting happenings.

UP, UP and away — in my beautiful balloon!

Well, almost!

Betty Plank, administrator of the Carmel Foundation, planned a special vacation to do just that — but things went afoul and the saga of the balloon came to a sad ending.

Daring Betty wrote a new will — sent copies to all her children — and headed to Auburn, Wash., for the first leg of her vacation. The highlight in Auburn was to attend the 70th birthday party of her favorite cousin, Lucille Borrow. And the main event of the party was to be a balloon ride.

"We psyched ourselves up for the big event by watching a slide presentation on balloon flying the previous night," said Betty. "Then at 5 a.m. the following morning we headed to the field to watch them prepare the balloon. They did everything just as we had seen in the slides. Then they took it up about seven stories high for a trial run — turned off the hot-air furnace — and someone noticed a little flick of flames coming out of the nozzle. We knew we were in trouble!"

The party-goers were told that the balloon couldn't be repaired before 5 p.m., and since morning is the best time for taking off into the wild, blue yonder, the group waved a sad goodbye to its beautiful pale green, blue and white balloon and settled for a champagne breakfast.

Lucille was also hosted to a second party attended by about 50 guests including her four children and all of her grandchildren.

Downhearted, but still determined to enjoy her vacation, Betty visited with her sister, Mrs. Alan Bunch (of Seattle) at the Bunch summer home on Dabob Bay near Quilcene, Wash.

While at the bay, Betty tried her hand at catching oysters, clams, crabs and regular old fish. "I actually caught my own crab for dinner," said Betty.

Betty's next stop was her hometown of Yakima, Wash., to visit friends and old school chums.

The vacation is just a memory now, but Betty is still dreaming of flying high in a beautiful (10-stories tall) balloon.

There's always next time, Betty!

GOOD PEOPLE are always remembered — and that fact was most obvious when William Ray Moore, resident of the Carmel Inn, celebrated his 84th birthday Oct. 2.

Ray was treated to a chicken luncheon with all the trimmings, and his very good friends, Frank and Gloria Garnero, owners of Wishart's Bakery, delivered him a chocolate birthday cake with buttercream frosting and beautiful yellow flowers. Fourteen guests, including other residents of the inn, celebrated with Ray.

Ray and the Garneros have been friends for many years, and Ray still drops by the bakery to chat. He used to visit the bakery and help Frank clean strawberries for their famous cakes and pies and run errands, such as doing the banking, for the Garneros.

Ray's longtime neighbors, Sumi Norton (17 years) and Anne Baudouine (11 years) also remember Ray, and not only on his birthday.

Sumi visits Ray each week, shaves him, cuts his hair and shares a happy smile with him. Ray used to help Sumi with her family when son Mike Norton (now a senior at Carmel High) was young.

"He was the only one with a car so he took all the ladies shopping once a week," said Sumi. "He was such a big help and we're certainly not going to forget him now."

Ray is a retired carpenter and his hobby is bowling. He served with the Army during World War II — with the Seabees in the Pacific.

Ray came to Carmel in 1920 and has lived here since that time.

Belated happy birthday wishes from all of us, Ray!

HAPPINESS is falling in love on St. Patrick's Day and getting married a few months later.

Such is the happy ending to the fairy tale story of Harriet Holman Barter and Charles "Skip" Heebner, who were married at the Carmel Presbyterian Church Oct. 5.

Harriet was escorted down the aisle by her two sons, Jeffrey S. Barter (now commissioned by the Franklin Mint for his art work as a wildlife artist) and Eric Barter, one of the managers of Holman's Men's Wear Department.

She was met at the altar by her bridegroom and his two sons, Jimmy, a tennis champ, and Johnny, also a fine athlete. Harriet's matron of honor was her daughter, Laurie Barter Stanley of Carmel.

The wedding reception was held at the bride's Carmel home, which was beautifully decorated for the special occasion. An open bar and a sumptuous buffet on the lawn and another inside the house were provided for the 250 guests.

A very special person attending the reception was Harriet's 96-year-old father, Wilford R. Holman.

"He wasn't able to get out of the car, so everyone gathered around to give him a welcoming kiss," said Harriet. "He's doing just fine and still lives in the old family home in Pacific Grove, which he has donated to that city.

Other special guests were Skip's mother, Margaret Dienelt, his daughter, Lisa Maceira, and his sister, Peggy Schoell.

Skip is taking time away from his job as manager of Mission Ranch (27 years) to honeymoon with his bride in Bermuda. The couple will visit in Bermuda with Harriet's daughter, Patricia, and her husband, Gare, and children Adam and Trever.

"I'm so happy that I can't even talk," said Harriet. "This is a very beautiful time of my life and this marriage is going to last forever!"

Happiness is Skip and Harriet!

ABOUT 400 PEOPLE attended the official opening of the Carmel Mission Museum last Saturday evening, Oct. 11.

The museum is dedicated to the memory of the late Sir Harry Downie, and presents a room on his work including a recreation of his workshop displaying the ancient tools he used in restoring the missions and historic buildings of California.

High Mass was sung in the basilica, which was fittingly decorated and illuminated for the occasion. The colors of Spain were used in the red and yellow silk banners and yellow and red floodlights.

Chancellor-General Manuel Lostada, representing the government of Spain, read a telegram from King Juan Carlos — congratulations in memory of the work Downie performed the last 50 years.

Downie was honored with a knighthood on two occasions from the Spanish government for his work in promoting Spanish culture in the United States.

After the reading of the telegram, Mayor Barney Laiolo unveiled the dedication plaque.

The three-room museum also presents a chronological sequence of the major periods of the Mission's history leading up to the present, including artifacts from various periods.

Curator Richard Joseph Menn is to be commended for his excellent work. He was present to welcome guests and discuss the artifacts.

TIME MARCHES on — but class reunions keep school chums and memories very much alive.

About 200 Mills College alumnae arrived from across the country to participate in a three-day event (Oct. 2-5) at the Oakland campus of the liberal arts college for women.

Local women attending included Mrs. Francis (Mariam) H. Herrick, Mrs. Joel Lambert Priest, Mrs. Ian Sutherland Mark, Mrs. Gilbert Harvey Barnes and Mrs. Bruce (Margery) Meyer, all of Carmel.

Also attending were Mrs. George Thornton of Monterey and Mrs. James M. Corbet of Pacific Grove.

All the members of the reunion classes and their husbands or escorts were hosted to a dinner on campus Friday evening.

Professor and Mrs. Francis H. Herrick were guests at the dinner. Herrick was a professor of history at Mills for 40 years, and Mrs. Herrick (a Carmel resident since 1904) was a member of the class of 1923.

The various classes held reunion dinners Saturday evening at local restaurants. The "Golden Girls," who were celebrating their 50th reunion, were hosted to a dinner on campus Saturday.

This year's program was a presentation under the direction of Dr. Howard Malpas, chairman of the drama department, who has prepared, A Woman's Place: Then and Now. The production focused on the role of women when humanities formed the core of their education and the role of women in the 80s, particularly at Mills, where the humanities may be combined with the newer woman's interest in preparation for law, medicine, the sciences, mathematics and administration and management.

The celebration ended with a champagne brunch Sunday.

"It was great," said Mrs. Corbet who attended with her husband, Jim. "It was my 45th reunion, but Jim's first — since we've only been married one year. Now I think I'll wait until I'm a 'Golden Girl' to attend another one."

THE BEAUTIFUL GARDEN at the Carmel home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Surtees was the setting for a tea Oct. 1 and given by the members of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services.

The tea was given in conjunction with the organization's upcoming Annual Fall Sale, which will be held Nov. 8 at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Attending were members of MPVS and the boards of Family Service Agency and the Visiting Nurse Association.

Each guest arrived with a plant to help stock the plant booth at the sale.

Last year's sale earned more than $12,000, which was donated in equal amounts to the Family Service Agency and the Visiting Nurse Association, which will again benefit from this year's sale.

MPVS is celebrating its 25th year of service to the Monterey Peninsula.

Members are working hard to gather items for the Fall Sale, and anyone wishing to donate merchandise may bring it to the Thrift Shop, 755 Broadway, Seaside, or a telephone call to 394-5028 will bring a prompt response.

new arrivals

ALICE AMANDA CALLAHAN

It's a girl!

Reigning like a princess at her Carmel home is little Alice Amanda Callahan, the first born of Glenn and Jennifer Callahan.

Baby Alice (named after her great-grandmother on her mother's side) arrived at Community Hospital at 4:30 p.m. Sept. 30. She weighed 8 pounds, 11 ounces, and was 20 inches long. Her mother said she has big blue eyes and lots of light brown hair.

Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Callahan of Porterville.

Baby Alice's dad is active in real estate and will also assume his position as vice president of the new National Bank of Carmel beginning Nov. 1.

Alice's dad was so excited about her arrival that he took a month off from work. He was even allowed to cut her umbilical cord in the delivery room — and his first comment when he saw her was, "Isn't she beautiful!"

Also counting the minutes before her arrival were the Ottos, who stayed in the labor room and then just outside of the delivery-room door until they heard Alice's first cry. For the next two weeks Grandma Sally gave the family rocking chair a good workout.

"Our little dog, Muffet, was so excited when we brought the baby home that she ran in circles," said Mrs. Callahan. "She's a Yorkshire terrier and only weighs 1 ½ pounds, so she looked like a ball of fur streaking around the walls!"

Baby Alice is so delighted with the world that she rarely cries and wakes up only for "chow time."

"She seems as happy to be here as we are to have her," said Mrs. Callahan. "She's a little doll and we love her."

Welcome, baby Alice!

TIFFANY LAUREN CONNELL

The happy sounds coming from the Carmel home of Dennis and Cathleen Connell belong to little Miss Tiffany Lauren Connell — the newest family member.

Tiffany arrived at Community Hospital at 10:49 p.m. Sept. 27. She weighed 7 pounds, 11 ounces, and was 20 inches long. She has big blue eyes and very blond hair.

Tiffany's maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchess of Sun City. Her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Connell of Carmel, owners of Carmel Glass. Her great-grandmother, who lives in Edinburgh, Scotland, is Mrs. Helen Henry.

A very special person who welcomed Tiffany is big brother Robert, 11.

"He's thrilled," said Mrs. Connell. "He was a bit pensive at first, but he's beginning to warm up and wants to hold the baby. Now I tell him that he can't hold her until he gets his homework finished — and it works!"

Tiffany's dad, a foreman for Carmel Glass, is delighted with his little daughter.

"Tiffany was born via natural childbirth, so Dennis and I spent a lot of time together," said Mrs. Connell. "He was a godsend, and when Tiffany arrived, he yelled, 'it's a girl!'"

The family pooch, Chip, isn't sure what Tiffany is, but does know that she makes a lot of noise. As for Thisby, the cat, she's totally insulted and won't even come in the house now that Tiffany has arrived, said Mrs. Connell.

Tiffany's welcome home party was especially exciting because grandma and grandpa Mitchell visited for two weeks and spent the entire time spoiling Tiffany and Robert.

Welcome to the world, little Miss Tiffany!

CURTIS ALEXANDER AUGUST

Welcome to the world to little Curtis Alexander August, who arrived at Community Hospital at 2:45 p.m. Sept. 21. He weighed 8 pounds, 6 ounces, and has blue eyes and dark brown hair.

His parents are Chuck and Virginia August of Carmel. His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crapo of San Bernardino, and his paternal grandmother is Mrs. June August of Rock Springs, Wyo.

There's a good chance that little Curtis will grow up to be a fireman, as his dad has been with the Carmel Fire Department seven years. His mom says that she's "retired" so she can spend all of her time with the new family member.

Curtis' dad is a graduate of Carmel High School and has lived in the area 20 years. His mom has lived here 10 years.

"This is just the beginning," said Mrs. August. "We hope to have many more children, and if they're all as good as Curtis, we'll be very lucky."

When August attended his most recent Thursday night meeting, his fellow firemen informed him that they had sworn young Curtis into the Volunteer Club — as a probationary volunteer.

TREVOR KEITH FOGG

Things are a bit hectic in the Carmel home of Keith and Ginny Fogg, who recently welcomed their first child — Trevor Keith.

Little Trevor was born at Community Hospital at 2:22 a.m. Sept. 17 and weighed 8 pounds, 14 ounces. He was 21 ¼ inches long and has blue eyes and blond hair.

His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. David Lambert of Pacific Palisades. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Fogg of Malibu.

Trevor's dad is a designer-builder, and his mom is a real estate agent.

Grandma and grandpa Fogg and great-grandmother Anna Traina were Trevor's first visitors after he arrived home from the hospital.

"There are other grandchildren, but Trevor is the only boy to carry on the Fogg name," said his proud mom. "He's made a big change in our family, but he's really a good baby and we like him a lot!"

Dad was so excited about Trevor's arrival that he took a week off from work to take care of the new baby and his mom.

As for the Fogg's pooch, Rufus, he's not the least bit jealous and loves to lick young Trevor's feet.

Welcome, Trevor Keith!

JEFFREY RYAN LEHR

Jeffrey Ryan Lehr of Pebble Beach won't have to worry about being an only child.

He was welcomed into the world by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Lehr, and his three sisters, Elisa, 11, Alexandra, 8, and Vanessa, 3.

Jeffrey was born at Community Hospital at 6:20 a.m. Sept. 22. He weighed 7 pounds, 9 ounces, and was, as his mom, Suzanne, put it, "long and skinny at 23 inches."

Jeffrey's dad is an allergist and his mom is a psychologist. His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kozek of New York.

"The older children all had different reactions to Jeffrey's arrival," said his mom. "Elisa and Alexandra were delighted, but Vanessa wants nothing to do with him — she feels that he has usurped her position as the baby of the family."

Carmel artist has many talents

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

ART AND SUSAN HALE KEANE go together like hand and glove.

In fact, she said she can't remember a time when she wasn't involved in or surrounded by art and the people in it.

A resident of Carmel 20 years, Ms. Keane recently closed the doors to her S.H. Keane Gallery.

"I've enjoyed having my own gallery for the past 14 years, but there are so many other things I want to do now," said blue-eyed Ms. Keane. "I recently visited the Superior Silk Screen Co. in Chicago and did a serigraph of a tiger. I'm also getting back into bronze sculpture."

Ms. Keane is the daughter of artist Walter Keane, famous for his paintings of large sad-eyed waifs. She recalled that as a small child she frequently posed for her father.

"We were known as the painting family," said Ms. Keane. "I joined my father in one of his major exhibitions in the '50s and it was my first sellout show. I was 7 years old and in Chicago for the first time. The exhibition was to have three opening parties — a preview for the press, an invitational preview and a general opening for the public."

Young Ms. Keane sold out at the press party.

One of her new-found patrons took her aside and seriously asked if she intended to make the fine arts her career. Her answer was obvious. She had been painting all her life.

She paints in oils she imports from England and Holland and on a very fine weave of French linen. Her subject matter is faces — people and wild animals, all very close up. One writer described her as: "Susan Keane — an eye like a telephoto lens."

One of her commissions now hanging at Loma Linda University is the face of Christ, four by five feet, and quite overwhelming.

Much of Ms. Keane's early childhood was spent in Paris, where her father studied fine art and her mother was a student of the culinary arts and fine dress design.

In 1960 Ms. Keane moved to Carmel, her home base ever since.

Joe Broadman, Ms. Keane's first art teacher at Sunset Elementary School, once told her she "had something very special — artistic license — and with that she could do anything, for there are no rules or laws in the field of art."

Ms. Keane has done just that. She broke tradition at Carmel High School in 1965 by being the first girl to enroll in metal shop. Her achievements were great, and upon graduation she received the award from the Bank of America for her outstanding creative work in bronze and silver casting.

She went on to study at the University of California at Berkeley, California Institute of the Arts in Los Angeles, California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland and finally two years of private study with the late Thomas Leighton of San Francisco. All that was sprinkled with frequent trips to Europe to study the works of the old masters.

AFTER HAVING her own gallery in San Francisco for some years, Ms. Keane returned to Carmel to open the Pine Inn Gallery in 1970, exclusively showing her own work. In 1975 she built the S.H. Keane Gallery which she ran for five years.

Being a lover of travel and adventure, Ms. Keane has been to such places as Australia and Tahiti, made numerous trips to Hawaii, Europe and Canada and has recently returned from a year in London where she studied and painted.

Her 8-year-old daughter, Stephanie, is already following in her mother's footsteps — she loves to paint.

"Stephanie loves to paint animals," said Ms. Keane. "Her favorite is a multi-colored owl, and people have tried to buy her work, but she isn't ready to sell yet. Although she loves to paint, she also wants to be an inventor when she grows up."

Artist Susan Hale Keane and a self-portrait.

After 14 years of owning her own gallery and having had several museum shows, Ms. Keane is now painting by commission only and will be doing two or three major exhibitions a year.

Next to painting, the culinary arts are one of Ms. Keane's more accomplished talents. She is presently writing a combined autobiography and cookbook, The Artist in the Kitchen.

Although she has traveled widely over the years with plans to continue doing so, Carmel-by-the-Sea will always be home to artist Susan Hale Keane.

Preview Recipe From The Artist in the Kitchen
Cheese Souffle

½ stick butter
4 T flour (presifted)
¼ t salt
1 cup grated Monterey jack cheese
1 cup milk
4 large eggs, separated
½ t thyme
¼ t cream of tartar

In a sauce pan, over low heat, melt butter. Add flour and salt and cook one minute. Slowly stir in milk and cook until sauce is of medium thickness (stir constantly to avoid lumps). Stir in cheese. Remove from heat. Beat egg yolks until thick. Add a little of the hot sauce to the yolks. Blend in. Slowly add yolks to remaining sauce. Add thyme. Beat egg whites until foamy, add cream of tartar. Beat until white stands in stiff peaks. Gently fold into your sauce. Butter (only to the bottom) of a 1½-quart souffle dish. Pour in the mixture. Place dish in a pie pan of hot water. Bake in a preheated oven (325°) 1¼ hours. When well puffed and browned, serve immediately (four servings.)

Win scholastic contest

CHS students are smartest

By STEVE HELLMAN

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL students went into the second annual Monterey County Scholastic Decathlon Oct. 4 with the cool composure of contestants without a winning chance.

It was the first time CHS had entered a team in the day-long decathlon; it faced larger schools that did not expect a tough challenge from Carmel.

The hastily-formed Carmel team prepared and crammed for only one week after a last-minute decision to accept the invitation to compete.

Speeches that were to be judged in one of the 10 events were hurriedly written the night before.

And at least one member of Carmel's team had his mind nowhere near the scholastic decathlon the day before; he was centering footballs to the Padres quarterback in a 40-14 loss to Gonzales High School.

But Carmel High School's decathlonetes surprised everyone, including themselves, during the contest hosted by Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. The decathlon included timed exams, verbal interviews and formal speeches in three divisions. Carmel's team placed first in all three divisions, and also walked away with honors as best all-around school over Monterey High School, RLS, Pacific Grove High School and Santa Catalina.

Individual first-place winners were: Bret Graham (honors division); Julia Kerfoot (scholastic division), and Kris Chubb (varsity division).

Other members of the team who carried it to best all-around honors were Jim Costain, Mike Colvin, Fiona MacKenzie, Laura Salmonsen, Lisa Kolb and Lynn Lazzarini. All members of the team are seniors, except Costain, a junior.

It was a clean sweep for Carmel, and a stunning upset over last year's winner, Monterey, which had gone on to place fifth against 27 schools in the statewide competition.

The Carmel team advances to the statewide Scholastic Decathlon Dec. 29 to Jan. 1 in Orange County.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS and team members say they won more because of high academic standards at Carmel High School than from the hasty, last-minute preparations. They contend the achievement of the decathlon team should help restore academic confidence in the school.

About $2,500 must be raised to send the team to Orange County; donations are being requested from the community.

Team members interviewed last week said they were tickled pink by the win. They retained that coolness that marked their action in the win, although in talking about the upcoming statewide competition, they said serious preparation plans have replaced the laconical attitude in their unexpected, serendipitous victory last week.

"We were quite relaxed," said Julia Kerfoot, the 16-year-old senior who took first place in the scholastic division.

Bret Graham

Julia Kerfoot

Kris Chubb

"Everyone expected us to lose, so we weren't real serious about it."

Kris Chubb, the 17-year-old senior who was hiking footballs the day before he took first place in the decathlon's varsity division, seconded Ms. Kerfoot.

"This guy from RLS said there was no way we were going to beat them," Chubb said. "I think we surprised them," he chuckled.

"We didn't know until a week before that we were going to compete," Bret Graham said.

The studious-looking 17-year-old senior captured first place in the honors division, competing against students with grade point averages better than 3.75; his is 4.0.

Graham said of the team's relaxed confidence, "We didn't have a big psychological build-up. We found the tests easy."

THERE WERE NINE events: three demonstrations that included an interview for conversation skills, essay contest and a formal speech; and six timed exams covering career education, English and literature, fine arts, mathematics, physical and biological sciences and social science.

Was there some kind of intensive preparation for the team to sweep the decathlon?

Chubb replied that the team members met every day at lunch for a week to review tests from last year's competition and to coach each other.

Ms. Kerfoot maintained that the preparation was not the key to victory.

"Basically," she said, "it was a question of what we already knew. I don't do much else except study a lot."

She said she plans to enter an Eastern women's college after graduation.

Graham replied also that the preparations amounted to little next to the benefit of their daily classroom studies.

"People knock Carmel High School, but they don't realize there's lot of good teachers and students," he said.

"You get out of education what you put in."

Chubb replied simply that he did not have that much time to prepare since he is center on the Padres football team.

"I didn't get to bed until one o'clock the night before," he said, "and I still found the tests easy."

In the formal speech event, the three students all focused on current affairs in the United States, speaking mainly of social and economic problems and their idea of solutions for the future.

The speeches had to follow one of five specific topics, and Ms. Kerfoot chose "Faith."

"I spoke about America, the mess we're in today and the need for faith," she said.

"My starting premise was the lack of faith in our country," she said. "Then I went into how the people of my generation have new ideas for the future."

Graham chose "Tradition," and the proud heritage of the United States.

"It's crumbling today, crumbling in the eyes of other countries," he said.

"I spoke of the need for strong leadership in the White House, and a clearing up of the scandals and conspiracies."

Chubb chose "Justice" and how the court system developed here.

"Our system of justice is the best in the world," he said, adding, however, that the contest judge suggested that he could have included more of his personal experience in the speech.

LOOKING AHEAD to the statewide competition in December, Ms. Kerfoot said, "I expect we'll prepare a little harder."

Graham noted that the team will face others from much larger schools — some as large as 6,000 students — while Carmel High School has just under 1,000.

"They must have more smart students," he said, then he paused and noted: "But it means they also have more dumb students too."

Chubb said simply that he looked forward to attending the Rose Parade in Pasadena.

"If we win the decathlon, we get to go see the Rose Bowl, so we have to win," he said.

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL teachers Robert Harr and Louise Tanous are the team advisers.

"We walked away with everything," Harr beamed about the win.

He said teachers will be volunteering their time during lunch to coach the team further for the statewide competition.

"Now we just have to whoop it up in the community to raise money to send the team to the statewide contest," he said.

Mel Schumacher is a secondary coordinator for the Monterey County Office of Education, which sponsored the decathlon. He said the Scholastic Decathlon was started in Orange County, and will be expanded to include more schools each year. By 1984, he said, it is hoped that scholastic decathlonetes will march alongside athletes in the international Olympics.

Some of Carmel's students might be there.

He's just another 'retiree'

By FLORENCE MASON

DESIGN STORE
Iraj Movahedi

Iraj Movahedi claims to be "almost retired."

However, his newest enterprise — Design Store — just opened last month and he is already talking about having another clothing shop some time in the future. A typical Carmel retiree?

The Design Store and Movahedi's first local enterprise — the Jewel Boutique in The Barnyard — are really family enterprises. Movahedi credits his wife, Akhtar, with actually running the new store, which is in Stonehouse Terrace on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth. His brother, Hedar Movahedi, runs Jewel Boutique.

The Design Store fills an unmet need in Carmel, according to Movahedi. It features tailoring for women and general alterations for both men and women. Custom-designed apparel and related items are also available. That is similar to a clothing store and factory Movahedi operated in Washington, D.C., until he was attracted to this area by the presence of relatives and friends as well as the climate. The family came to this country from Iran.

Iraj and Akhtar Movahedi live in Mid-Valley. They have a daughter who is going to a fashion and design school in San Francisco, and two sons who still live in Washington.

"Being with relatives and friends" is Movahedi's reply when asked if he has any other interests or hobbies.

PERSONALIZED FINANCIAL SERVICES
Jerry Ackerman and Jane Bracher

Personalized Financial Service is an offshoot of an older business and it is also a new partnership.

Jerry Ackerman has had a bookkeeping and tax service here (Ackerman Business Service) for three years. In the course of working with various local businesses, he realized that there were also people who needed help with their checkbooks, bill paying and accounts. That realization led to Personalized Financial Services, in the Carmel Rancho Professional Building near Brinton's.

who's news
on the carmel business scene

In Jane Bracher, Ackerman found a partner with appropriate background and interests. Out here from the Midwest with her husband, James, and their 9-year-old daughter, Beth, Mrs. Bracher has had extensive experience with financial companies and in the accounting departments of several large companies. Individualizing and personalizing business services appealed to her.

The Brachers live in Monterey. Mrs. Bracher likes to travel and, on the local scene, swimming and tennis get her away from a preoccupation with figures.

Ackerman spent 10 years working for CPA firms in Pacific Grove, where he lives with his wife and two children. He still finds time to be an active member of the YMCA Men's Club.

Don Virgilio, owner
Susan Gospodnetich, manager

Don Virgilio is that rare person — the absentee owner of a new Carmel business.

But the manager of Cal's Candy Shoppe, Susan Gospodnetich, has lived in this area all of her 21 years.

The store, which replaced a sports shop on the lower level of Carmel Plaza (next to Thinker Toys), is the third opened by Virgilio, who lives in Reno. The others are in Reno and San Francisco. Mrs. Gospodnetich explained, "He just saw Carmel as a very good business location."

It's easy and fun to shop in this new candy store, whether you want to buy one piece of candy or a basketful. All the candies are the same price and it's self-service. Customers walk around from barrel to barrel with their baskets and their selections are weighed together at the counter.

The variety of candies at Cal's Candy Shoppe is impressive. There are candies made in nearby San Jose, some special ones from other states (such as salt water taffy from Salt Lake City) and candies from Holland, Italy and England. There is natural licorice and even some sugar-free candy for dieters.

Mrs. Gospodnetich's father is Superior Court Judge Ralph Drummond. She attended Notre Dame School in Salinas and married Rozario Gospodnetich, whose family is Yugoslavian, last March. The couple lives in Monterey.

Mrs. Gospodnetich heard about the opening for a manager of this new store when the owner opened an account at the bank where she was working.

Now she is so busy that she doesn't have time for many other activities, except tennis.

Miss Turner, S. Fish engaged

Robert Dean Turner of Burlingame recently announced the engagement of his daughter Diana to S. Stuyvesant Fish of Carmel.

Miss Turner, the daughter of the late Mrs. Nike Turner of San Francisco, attended Sarah Dix Hamlin in San Francisco, the University of California, Berkeley, Yale University and various schools in Europe. She is presently a curator at the Asian Art Museum of San Francisco. Her brother and sister-in-law are Robert and Louise Turner of San Francisco.

Fish, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webster Fish (Olga Wiborg) of Carmel, attended the Douglas School in Carmel, Cate School in Carpinteria, and Harvard University. He served as an officer in the United States Navy in World War II aboard the carriers U.S.S. Saratoga and U.S.S. Cape Gloucester.

He was engaged in mining in Nevada and business in San Francisco before returning to operate the Palo Corona ranch in Carmel in the middle 1950's. The 5,000-acre ranch overlooks the entrance to Carmel Valley.

There will be a very small wedding service in December to be attended only by immediate family and close friends.

She teaches them to swim before they can walk

By JOANNE HODGEN

Alan McEwen photo

Jesse Stuart teaches Tamarin McBrayer, 9 months, how to swim.

A TODDLER SPLASHES across a swimming pool, kicking and stroking before reaching the edge.

He laughs and kicks back out to the center of the pool.

There is no danger of this child drowning. He is "water safe."

Jesse Stuart has taught hundreds of preschool-age children like him how to swim over the last 23 years.

Her ability to teach infants the fundamentals of swimming before some are able to crawl has taken Ms. Stuart to the homes of many celebrities including Barbra Streisand, Cary Grant, Irving Wallace and Vanessa Redgrave.

During the past summer, she gave swimming instruction to babies and preschool-age youngsters at Esalen and the River Inn near Big Sur.

"My lot in life is to get kids swimming as early as possible," she said.

"I love the water. I feel like I have to be in the water at least once a day for a baptism."

A tangle of sun-bleached hair tops her petite frame. At 41, she has the energy of a spry teen-ager.

MS. STUART said she can trace her desire to teach swimming to age 6 when her year-old sister fell off the end of a pier and nearly drowned. Ms. Stuart pulled her out of the water.

Growing up in Venice with its expanse of sandy beaches, she was constantly in the warm water and became an avid surfer by age 15.

At age 17, while living in west Los Angeles, she said she observed and listened to a successful swim instructor who taught infants. Though she never received formal training from her, Ms. Stuart said she learned enough to strike out on her own.

During that period, she graduated from UCLA with a degree in child education. By then married (her former name is Jann Stevens) and a mother, she began to teach her infant daughter how to swim.

Jolie, now 18, was 11 months old when she swam across an MGM tank for the opening sequence of the Unsinkable Molly Brown, a movie starring Debbie Reynolds.

Ms. Stuart's success with preschool youngsters spread by word of mouth as amazed parents saw their friends' children swimming, he said.

The method she has used to teach Jolie and hundreds of other children is rooted in a child's natural buoyancy, trust and instincts.

Breath control is an important factor, she said. She holds a baby aloft and gently blows in his face. Ms. Stuart explained that an infant will automatically hold his breath. The child is quickly dunked in and out of the water. "They don't swallow, don't inhale and after awhile they become accustomed to it," she said.

Most important for instructions is a heated pool, she said. A temperature of 86 degrees is needed if a child is to feel relaxed in the water.

Swimming, she said, should be a game. Long before school age, a youngster should enjoy playing in water and experiment with holding his breath, blowing bubbles and putting his face under water, Ms. Stuart explained. When parents are bathing their baby, it is a good time to let him splash in the water, she said.

She will let a baby fall into the water, then catch and turn him on his back, she said, repeating that again and again. Swimming is taught by giving them a gentle push to the edge, which they then grab onto.

"It is a bit of behavior modification and also instinctive to scramble to the edge," she said.

Ms. Stuart stated that parents are encouraged to get in the water with their children during the lessons.

Ms. Stuart is always in the water with her pupils. "You've got to be right down there with them to give each child individual support," she explained.

Constant demonstrations of love and affection build their confidence, she said.

Ms. Stuart emphasizes that swimming should always be fun for a youngster. "As soon as a child begins to cry, I immediately take him out of the water and then talk and find out what is troubling him," she said.

Preschool-age children are only given one swimming aid, she said—small flippers. "If they have flippers and feel they're going someplace they're inspired."

INFANTS YOUNGER than 3 months are not accepted into her programs, she said. The danger in teaching babies that age lies in their delicate lungs. "Their lungs can inflate like a balloon and burst," she explained, but emphasized she has never had a drowning or a near drowning.

She also cautioned that parents should always keep an eye on their youngsters when around water.

The benefits in a youngster learning to swim are more than physical. She said that studies in Russia indicate that children who know how to swim often have an above-average I.Q. "A little one gets a lot of strokes for learning something so early," she observed.

Her "lot in life," as she described it, has taken her to Europe nine times. She lived in England five years — where she taught at the Vanessa School, a nursery school in a ghetto district of London built by actress Vanessa Redgrave.

Miss Redgrave donated 86,000 pounds to build and equip the school, then turned it over to the Inner London Education Authority, according to Ms. Stuart.

While waiting for the school to be completed, she lived and worked in Cambridge, where she studied the effects of cold and warm water on children's abilities to learn swimming. She also helped film a documentary on swimming with her husband, Robert Stevens, which has been shown throughout Great Britain.

She taught at the school from 1973 to 1975, but Ms. Stuart quipped that she "broke her neck in London. It was a big city and it was hard times."

She said she worked as long as 10 hours a day in the heated pool teaching preschool youngsters during the day, the sisters and brothers of co-workers in the late afternoon and local mothers at night.

"I did that for three years and was at the end of my rope," she said.

However, she still has warm thoughts for that time and the woman who made it possible.

MS. STUART left London with her family — two sons and a daughter — in 1975 and moved to the Monterey Peninsula. While here she again pursued a career as swim instructor, teaching youngsters at the Montessori school in Carmel Valley.

In 1978, she moved to the Hawaiian island of Maui, where she lived until February.

While in Maui she worked for the Maui Special Learning Center's preschool for children with learning problems in speech, vision, movement, understanding or behavior.

Just as rewarding as teaching children is taking a fearful adult and making him feel confident in the water.

"When there's a fear, it's very difficult to work with an older person," she said.

While on Maui, she said she taught a 65-year-old woman psychologist. "She had such a dreadful fear that she brought two co-workers along for support," Ms. Stuart recalled.

SHE TOOK the woman slowly through each step — splashing water on the face, bubbling in the water then sitting on the steps of a pool and putting her face in the water. Finally she was able to swim the width of the deep end, according to Ms. Stuart.

However, a disastrous final lesson occurred when the woman inhaled some water. "She was so terrified, her fear was going to kill her," Ms. Stuart said.

Further attempts to get the woman back into the pool failed, she said. However, if the woman is ever thrown from a boat she would be able to swim, Ms. Stuart said.

You owe your horse--and yourself-- the good life at Rancho Laureles

SOUND, PROFESSIONAL horse care begins with safe, comfortable accommodations and a high-quality feeding program at Rancho Laureles.

Our deluxe new barn offers the ultimate in luxury, safety and comfort. Each 12 x 12 box stall opens onto a securely fenced 24-foot paddock. Inside, all stalls have foot-cushioning rubber mats, automatic waterers and feeders. Stall fronts and sliding doors have heavy-gauge mesh so the horse benefits from good air circulation and seeing what's going on, while he is prevented from hanging his head over the door and possibly fussing with passing horses or people.

Walls between stalls are solid, so there's no rivalry with the horse next door. And all edges are reinforced with metal anti-chew strips. There's even a convenient blanket rack on each stall door.

Two spacious tack rooms are convenient to all stalls and offer individual tack lockers for each patron.

Of course, our old barn has a charm all its own, with oversized, exceptionally airy stalls and the same large adjoining paddocks. A large new wash rack with hot water to pamper your horse is right outside.

WHERE WE RIDE

Our two securely-fenced riding arenas offer excellent, well-drained sand footing. One measures 135 x 325 and is used for basic schooling as well as jumping. Our new 150 x 275 foot arena includes a regulation dressage court with plenty of room to spare!

And our 75-foot round lungeing arena is proving useful not only for lungeing, but for working green horses or beginning riders who profit from the secure surroundings.

The half-mile sand track that encircles our easterly fields is a perfect place to warm up a horse (or cool him out after a workout), leg up for an event or simply trot a few miles as good exercise.

Then there's Garland Park with its 541 acres of trails, plus the adjoining trails through to Robinson Canyon and the soon-to-be-opened new parkland to the east — a trailrider's paradise, uniquely beautiful every day of the year.

THE FINEST CARE

Now, more than ever, we believe that our feeding program pays off. Our 17% protein alfalfa hay cubes put weight on even rundown, skinny horses and keep it there.

We are also pleased to work with two of Monterey County's finest veterinarians and an excellent farrier, who all contribute to your horse's overall health and well-being.

LESSONS, ANYONE?

Whether you're just learning to post or have a specific problem over fences or in dressage, Doug Downing, our knowledgeable and very personable instructor, will come up with an answer.

He is available for private, semi-private or small group lessons on the flat or over fences.

GOOD COMPANY

One of the nicest things about Rancho Laureles is its relaxed, informal atmosphere. People tend to linger, and that makes us feel good, because it means they like it here. After a ride, they'll sit around, enjoy a cup of coffee or a soft drink and chat — mostly about horses, of course, but not always. Real friendships have grown among our riders.

But best of all, newcomers are made to feel genuinely welcome, whether they're nervous beginners or old pros. There's always a helping hand and a generous sprinkling of advice, and you feel you "belong" right from the start.

Seeing is believing. Why not drive out into the Carmel Valley sunshine to pay us a visit?

Valley readings

Pollution breaks record

By STEVE HELLMAN

AIR POLLUTION levels in Carmel Valley during the recent heat spell exceeded state and federal standards with readings that broke all previous records.

The monitoring station at Mid-Valley showed ozone readings of 0.15 parts per million on several days between Sept. 30 and Oct. 3, according to Larry Odle, director of the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District.

The state standard for the safe level of ozone, or photo-chemical smog, is 0.10 ppm, Odle noted, and the federal standard is 0.12 ppm.

"Anything over the state and federal standards is considered a health hazard to sensitive population groups," Odle said: old and young persons and those with respiratory diseases.

Stagnant air and unusually high temperatures contributed to the record readings in the Valley, Odle said. The previous record was 0.09 ppm June 27 at the Mid-Valley monitoring station, which was installed in March 1979.

The high concentrations of ozone were alarming, Odle said, because they persisted for unusually long durations. On Oct. 2, for example, readings at Mid-Valley showed 0.12 to 0.14 ppm from 4 to 7 p.m., he said.

The readings, however, were not nearly as serious as the levels recorded during the smog alerts in Los Angeles this month. Odle said readings there were consistently over 0.25 ppm.

While the readings here did exceed state and federal standards, Odle insisted they do not indicate a trend toward polluted air in the Valley.

"People should just realize that this beautiful area is not immune to pollution," he said.

Sources of the ozone are mainly motor vehicle emissions, releases from buildings and smog transported into the Valley from elsewhere, he said.

The air pollution district is completing a study of the transported sources for its three-county area, he said. It will determine whether Carmel Valley and other parts of Monterey County will experience more frequent air pollution in the future.

Reservoir site selection due in Valley

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board is scheduled to select a major reservoir site in Carmel Valley and outline a management program for the Carmel River.

The board will consider those two controversial topics at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 20, in the Monterey City Council chambers.

The district has received a barrage of letters from ranchers in upper Carmel Valley who oppose a reservoir on or near their property, according to Bruce Buel, district general manager.

The district is considering two proposals to increase the water supply for the Peninsula: an intermediate-size dam on the Carmel River below the existing San Clemente Reservoir, and an off-stream reservoir in Chupines Canyon.

Buel said that cattle ranchers in Chupines Canyon are forming a solid front of opposition to the proposal to inundate a section of the canyon.

The district board at its Oct. 20 meeting will direct staff to begin a feasibility study on one of the two sites, Buel said.

While the decision will not commit the district to the site, Buel said, the study will be a distinct and clear indication of the proposal that the district will pursue.

He said, "The study will cost $100,000, so it will be in the interest of the district to pursue the project it chooses to study."

The proposed dam would cost $40 million, hold 70,000 acre-feet of water and provide 26,000 acre-feet of water a year, Buel noted. The Peninsula now uses 15,000 acre-feet a year.

The off-stream reservoir in Chupines Canyon would hold 5,000 acre-feet with water piped to it from the river, cost $13 million and have an annual yield of 4,000 acre-feet, he said.

THE CARMEL VALLEY Property Owners Association has voted to support an intermediate-size dam.

The project chosen will be paid for through water connection fees assessed to new homes and new businesses and through fees charged to all property owners within the district, Buel noted.

The district's final proposal would ultimately have to be placed before local voters.

The district board has agreed in concept to assume responsibility for a management program for the Carmel River.

An outline of the program will be discussed at the Oct. 20 meeting, Buel said.

It will cover a range of activities that the district could pursue in preparing, implementing and monitoring the river channel program.

The activities include maintenance of vegetation along the river channel, monitoring and irrigation of the vegetation and revegetation in certain areas, channel clearing, bank stabilization, erosion control and an information clearinghouse on the river.

Buel said the program would be funded through formation of a zone along the river in which landowners would be assessed service fees.

Residents and property owners within the proposed zone would have to approve its formation in an election, he noted.

The district plans to have a program to submit to voters in November 1981, Buel said.

White Oaks foul-up led to stricter septic tank rules

By STEVE HELLMAN

A BUREAUCRATIC FOUL-UP on the White Oaks project in Carmel Valley Village precipitated a chain of events that led to the strict new septic tank standards for all other Valley projects.

The Monterey County Health Department recently imposed the tougher standards for master septic tank systems on advice from the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The Health Department received the new standards after it submitted an inquiry to the regional water board because of concerns over the threat to groundwater quality from large septic tanks, including the system planned for White Oaks.

The regional water board — the state agency based in San Luis Obispo charged with establishing guidelines for sewage disposal and other water-related systems in an area covering Monterey County — issued new standards in July that prohibit high-density developments using septic tanks in rural areas of the county, including Carmel Valley.

The new standards prohibit a project as dense as the 38-unit White Oaks project from using septic tanks.

The new standards may curtail the number of units and discourage clustering in the developments that can be approved in Carmel Valley.

THE WHITE OAKS condominiums are being built on 8.1 acres between Paso Hondo and Esquiline roads. Formerly known as the Barbara Mark project, it has been the subject of lawsuits and long-standing opposition from residents who feel it is too urban and too large for the rural Village.

Its density is 4.7 units per acre, while the new sewage standards allow primarily for one unit per acre, or at the maximum with good soil conditions, two units per acre.

The project was exempted, however, from the new sewage standards because it was approved by the county a year before the state issued the standards. Final building and septic tank permits have been issued by the county Building and Health departments; bulldozers are now grading the site for construction.

An investigation of state and county records by this newspaper has determined that:

■ Construction on the White Oaks condominiums has begun despite the fact that developer Jerome Romis has not received a waste discharge permit from the regional water board.

■ The regional water board staff has reservations about the sewage disposal plan for White Oaks, and the possibility remains that a waste discharge permit may be issued that requires the project to adhere to the strict new standards — a scenario that officials admit is not altogether impossible and one which could stop the project from being completed.

■ The county Health Department was concerned enough about the project's disposal plan and other proposed septic systems earlier this year that it contacted the regional water board for advice.

■ The board's executive director, Kenneth Jones, responded by calling for the county to conform to the regional basin plan and impose standards for master septic tanks that are three times tougher than what the county was using.

■ That chain of events, culminating in the tough new standards, was triggered in part by the fact that the draft Environmental Impact Report for the project, including the analysis of its sewage disposal plan, was never submitted to the regional water board for comment as required by law.

■ The state agency staff had not seen the key environmental documents for the White Oaks project until last week when Romis submitted the EIR, tentative map and use permit — all approved by the county before the state had even considered issuing a waste discharge permit.

While the state and county officials contend that no law has been broken in what they call a normal chain of events, they concede that it does point up pitfalls in their planning process and at worst makes the planning checkpoints appear slightly slipshod.

Romis maintained that he has received all the permits required to begin building, although he acknowledged that a waste discharge permit from the state is still forthcoming.

The waste discharge permit will be considered at the January meeting of the regional water board.

MEANWHILE, officials note, the developer is proceeding with construction at his own risk.

An outside chance remains that the White Oaks condominiums will be past the foundation and framing stage before the last in a long line of permit approvals is cleared, if at all.

Walter Wong, director of the county Health Department, said in an interview last week, "The White Oaks project could be started, completed and ready to sell and still not have a waste discharge permit. They just wouldn't be able to sell the units."

Wong said he contacted the regional water board in April for recommendations on the use of master septic tank systems. His inquiry was prompted by several urgent concerns:

- Tests had shown septic tank effluent was already reaching the groundwater in Carmel Valley, due to the large number of septic systems, including some that were not functioning properly.
- More septic systems were being proposed, including the large master systems for multiple-unit developments which would further threaten the groundwater quality.
- A plan to sewer the Valley was still anathema to residents and would not be a viable alternative for the forseeable future.

The regional water board responded in a letter dated July 29 from Executive Director Kenneth Jones.

He recommended that the county immediately begin applying standards from the regional Basin Plan. Conservative standards had been applied before to individual septic systems for single-family residences, but the state now wanted them applied equally or even more conservatively on master septic tank systems.

Where the county had allowed discharge of 1,000 gallons per acre per day, the state stipulated 300 gallons per acre, or 600 gallons per acre maximum if the soil and other geologic conditions were favorable.

The state also required a 10-foot separation from groundwater, more than eight-foot separation from bedrock, good to excellent percolation rates and a slope in the disposal area of less than 10 percent.

Elaborating on the density criteria in the Basin Plan, the state defined one housing unit as equivalent to a sewage flow of 300 gallons a day.

Bottom line to the new standards imposed on the county — development density could not be any greater than one unit per acre where septic tank systems were to be used. Where the 1,000-gallon standard had allowed up to six units per acre on a septic system, the new standards allowed only one or a maximum of two units per acre.

The standards effectively eliminated high-density projects like White Oaks, and also undermined the county's policy for clustering of residential development in Carmel Valley.

Wong noted last week that projects like the Mid-Valley Shopping Center would not be allowed under the new standards, nor would other high-density development unless alternative sewage disposal systems were used. That could include sewage treatment plants, although they are too costly and not feasible for small projects. Compost privies, dry toilets and other enclosed systems may be allowable, Wong said, although he said there were also serious health questions regarding their use.

"The days of having big developments on master septic tanks are gone," Wong said.

"The biggest clustering you're going to see is five units on five acres."

He acknowledged that the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan allows for greater densities and clustering, but he said the policies may have to be altered to conform to the sewage standards.

The only other alternatives, he said, would be sewering the Valley, which he admitted was politically unfeasible, or decreasing the volume of septic tank effluent, which would mean fewer new housing units in the Valley.

Wong said he would meet soon with county Planning Commissioners William Peters and Gary Varga to discuss what measures would have to be taken to conform to the new standards.

PROJECTS, meanwhile, that had already received the county's approval could proceed without conforming to the new standards, Wong said, including White Oaks.

While he acknowledged that concerns over White Oaks had helped prompt his inquiry to the regional water board, Wong insisted that it would be unfair to apply the new standards to the project.

"Legally," Wong said, "I can't stop projects that we've already approved."

William Leonard, supervising engineer for the regional water board, confirmed that White Oaks has yet to receive a waste discharge permit from his board.

He said the permit would be considered at the board's January 1981 meeting.

Asked what the chances were for its approval, Leonard would not comment, except to say that his staff has still not decided whether the project should conform to the new standards.

"There have been some weird things proposed in Carmel Valley," he said.

"Clustering is the magic word, but we're concerned directly any kind of structure that strikes your fancy would be in keeping with the theme.

As in past events, Hommes said, there will be no rules at all, no pre-registration, no restrictions as to who may enter and no entry fees.

Awards will be made in both the Advanced Sand Box and Novice Sand Pile categories. There will also be a Grand Sand Award (a gold shovel and plaque) and the Sour Grapes Award, given to the proverbial sore loser, or he who complains the most.

Even though there are no rules, Hommes said some common sense should be exercised during the contest, if at all possible.

- Dogs: Hours of labor spent in obtaining a masterpiece castle can be wasted with the wag of a tail, so dogs are unwelcome at the beach that day and are illegal at the Sand Castle Contest.
- Unnatural items on the beach: They should be removed when you leave.
- Holes: entrants who enjoy burrowing into the sand should realize that huge holes can cave in and trap people. Consequently, any castle cellars or other excavations should not be of a depth to be dangerous.
- Mechanical earth-moving equipment: The City of Carmel frowns on the use of such equipment.
- Parking and traffic laws will be strictly enforced, and beach-goers are asked to respect the property rights of residents who live along the beach.

- AN INFORMATION TABLE, for those who think it will help, will be located, as usual, at the base of 13th street. Registration will take place on the site of each project. Committee members will wander the beach taking registrations.

The Great Sand Castle Contest is sponsored by the Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The main idea, said Hommes, is to have a blast.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

A time of feasts

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The June 7th invocation honoring Monterey's 210th birthday party, the Merienda.

Look with kindly eyes, oh Lord, on the exclusive confraternity, Los Cocineros de la barbacoa.

Last year I called them viejos y viejos verdes. For this I apologize. Their average age is not over 70, and that is young in my book.

Their motto is, "If you can't stand the incense of beef barbecueing, stay out of the pit." They bear the heat with flagons of vino rubio and therapeutic barrels of cool cervesa. They perform a work of mercy as they feed the hungry who have been on a steak-free diet since the last merienda.

Padre Junipero Serra described the first Merienda held under a pine bow arbor on the beach after he and Don Gaspar de Portola had completed the ceremonies prescribed by Spanish law and established Monterey as the capital of Alta and Baja California June 3, 1770. In keeping with the best traditions, they held the second fiesta and merienda 11 days later on the Feast of Corpus Christi. Padre Serra wrote it was a relief from the hard life of the past days, and it was a splendid fiesta, as elaborate as any held in Mexico City.

Searching the hold of the sailing ship San Antonio for medicine, Padre Serra found two unmarked boxes of processional lamps. He called them "stowaway" and "miraculous" lanterns.

I feel their light still shines a blessing on Monterey and may we all be warmed by their glow.

Lions Club raises money

MEMBERS of the Carmel Lions Host Club collected $1,450 in Carmel and Pebble Beach during the Lions' White Cane Days fund-raising drive Oct. 3 and 4.

Jim Wright of the Lions Club said an additional $10,000 was donated by Arlene Rosner of Carmel.

He said that to his knowledge it is the largest donation the Carmel Lions Host Club has received.

Proceeds will be combined with those of other Peninsula Lions Clubs and used to pay a portion of the mortgage plus maintenance for the Peninsula Blind Center in Pacific Grove, he said.

Other recipients include the Lions' Eye Foundation in San Francisco, Guide Dogs for the Blind and the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

The Lions Club has also contributed to the purchase of equipment at local hospitals and helped finance the needs of handicapped children and glasses for underprivileged children.

The Lions Clubs of California and Nevada designate two days each year for sight conservation.

Erasing chalk on tires is illegal

ANYONE CAUGHT erasing parking enforcement chalk marks on his tire may chalk up a $50 fine because of an ordinance passed by the Carmel City Council in September.

Rolling a car forward to obliterate a chalk mark and rubbing the mark out are all illegal.

The ordinance now states: "The removal, obliteration or concealment of any chalk mark or other distinguishing mark used by any police officer or other employee or officer of this city . . . if done for the purpose of evading a parking regulation . . . shall be unlawful and shall constitute an infraction."

A city employee must witness the act before a citation is issued.

A driver can gamble. If the parking space is still empty after a loop around the block, it is legal to slip back into the slot.

Program gives free food to the aged

Capitol News Service

Gov. Brown has signed a bill which will expand a program which supplies fruits and vegetables to senior citizens.

The program allows senior citizens to have fruits and vegetables left over after harvests when the excess crop usually just rots. After an agreement is made with local farmers, senior citizens organize the picking and transportation of the food to distribution centers where older Californians may receive it free.

The bill mandates the state Department of Aging to begin the programs throughout the state.

White Oaks plan

with the volume of waste discharged. They can cluster all the units on one corner of the land, but we're concerned that with master septic tank systems the failure of a system is a much greater threat to the groundwater."

Eric Gobler, the staff engineer in charge of the White Oaks application, confirmed that the White Oaks project presented a particular problem.

"The project falls into a grey area, since the county has already approved it," he said.

While the county assumed the project was exempt from the new standards, Gobler said his board still has to decide whether it has to conform.

"We haven't made a decision yet," he said. "It appears there will be a significant impact on groundwater. We're particularly concerned with their plan to use deep trenches."

The county's approval of a septic tank permit and building permit placed the state agency in a difficult position, Gobler acknowledged, but he insisted it was not unusual for the county to permit building to begin before the state issued its permit.

"It's not unusual, and it's not really the county's fault," Gobler said.

"We weren't contacted by the developers until they'd met all the county's conditions and started the project."

SO FAR AS HIS office was concerned, Gobler said, the foul-up came when the agency never received the draft EIR to review and comment on the project's sewage disposal plan, and in the developer's late application for a waste discharge permit.

"We never received the EIR, so that we're reviewing it now for the first time," he said.

Would his office recommend that the project adhere to the new standards?

Gobler replied that the EIR had been certified by the county in February 1979, long before the state standards went into effect. He added that a preliminary review of the EIR indicated that measures were being implemented that would satisfy his office, and not require conformance with the new standards.

"All I can do is guarantee we'll make a thorough review of the EIR and require more information if necessary," he said.

What happens if the state finds the project should conform to the new standards?

"They (the developers) can build the whole project if they want before they get the state discharge permit," Gobler replied.

"They'd have the option of putting in a different sewage system if we required it," he said.

"I know it seems like a backwards system," he admitted, "but it results from all the approvals that are necessary."

LYNN MOUNDAY, the county planner in charge of the EIR for the project, said that the document was not forwarded to the regional water board because of a misunderstanding.

He said the county sent the EIR to the state clearinghouse in Sacramento, which is supposed to distribute it to the state agencies that will have to issue permits for the project.

At the time the EIR was sent to Sacramento, Mounday noted, the developer was proposing a tennis ranch, which did not require a discharge permit. For that reason, the EIR was not forwarded to the regional water board for review and comment.

Mounday acknowledged, however, that the county could have sent the EIR directly to the regional water board after the project was changed and required a waste discharge permit.

ROMIS SAID he assumed the waste discharge permit would be issued without any problem.

"As far as I know, we've got all our permits," he said. "Otherwise, we wouldn't be working."

A MASS OF DETAILS

So it won't come as a complete surprise to you, as it does to a lot of homeowners who try to sell their own homes, here's something you should know about. Selling a home involves a mass of petty details. There's paper work to do, attorneys to be dealt with, a title search to be made, and vital arrangements to be made concerning down payment, escrow accounts and mortgage financing. Unless you're an expert on these subjects, you'll be working at a disadvantage. Erring on any one of these details could ruin your sleeping habits and your financial position.

Honestly, it pays to sell your home through a good Realtor. It's his full-time business to keep on top of these details. He's alert to every step of the transaction, knows how to make the necessary arrangements, and follow through on details. He knows how important it is to protect all parties against misunderstandings and the importance of all agreements being in writing and properly drafted.

Cal-Am plan

4 CV wells OK'd

Text and photos
By STEVE HELLMAN

AFTER 2½ YEARS of emotional debate over a project fraught with technical complexities and political side issues, the Monterey County Planning Commission has hastily approved four more high-volume wells in Carmel Valley.

The commission had the minimum of five members for a quorum at its Oct. 8 meeting to take the long-awaited vote on the controversial California-American Water Co. project.

The public hearing lasted more than four hours with a steady parade of speakers addressing a myriad of issues from Cal-Am's profit motive to the county's failure to protect the Carmel River.

The very need for the four wells was called into question repeatedly, and several speakers demanded that approval not be granted without stringent conditions for irrigating vegetation along the river.

Alexander Henson, a lawyer, spoke for several persons in calling for Cal-Am to irrigate around all of its 12 existing wells as a condition for the four new wells.

Cal-Am representatives responded by calling the suggestions amateurish and said the plea for irrigation around all the wells was "chasing ghosts."

Despite the weight of testimony and the ramifications of the project, the commission was pressured into a hasty vote when member Walter Basham announced that he had a personal emergency requiring his attendance elsewhere.

Pressured also by an Oct. 24 deadline for action on the use permits, the commission decided to consider the conditions critical to the project and vote on it instead of reconvening the meeting later.

The deliberations took 15 minutes.

THE MEETING ended on a note of confusion.

Cal-Am officials were left in dismay over two of the conditions. Basham rushed off to attend to cows that were calving on his south county cattle ranch.

PETE O'DAY, chief executive and chairman of the board for Cal-Am, indicated the next day that the water utility will appeal two of the conditions to the county Board of Supervisors.

"I've never been to a meeting like it," he said. "I think they voted, and they didn't know what they voted on.

"It was real confusing. Two of the conditions we couldn't possibly live with."

The conditions at issue would require Cal-Am to provide an unlimited amount of water to irrigate the vegetation along the entire length of the river encompassed by its wells, and would also restrict its withdrawal of water from the Carmel Valley aquifer to its present level until the irrigation measures are implemented and proven effective.

Cal-Am would be further prohibited from using water from the four new wells until the irrigation program was proven, a condition that O'Day insisted was completely unreasonable. "I can't risk $4 million in capital (for the four new wells) that way," he fumed.

COMMISSIONER WILLIAM PETERS of Carmel Valley moved for approval of the wells with a set of conditions proposed by the county planning staff.

The conditions called for landscaping, subdued lighting and submersible, noiseless pumps at the wells.

The conditions also provided that no water be taken from the four wells until Cal-Am and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District conclude an agreement for maintenance of the river corridor.

It was also stipulated that the water management district monitor the wells and the drawdown of the groundwater.

Cal-Am was further required to experiment with a program to rotate the use of its series of wells to lessen the drawdown depth in any one area. That plan was to be submitted to the county Planning Department and water management district not later than 18 months after the four wells are in service.

The temporary restriction on Cal-Am's withdrawal of water from the acquifer to no more than 5,600 acre-feet per year, and the stipulation that it irrigate around all of its wells were conditions recommended by the Lower Valley Advisory Committee and added in the closing minutes of the meeting by Commissioner Gary Varga.

He heeded the warnings from several persons who complained that Cal-Am had failed to provide protective measures for vegetation around its existing wells.

Varga also questioned the agreement between Cal-Am and the water management district to experiment with a rotation program.

"You're going to pump like hell until you reach the stress point?" he asked.

ATTORNEY LEONARD WEISS, representing Cal-Am, noted that the agreement called for the water management district to hire a plant physiologist who would formulate the irrigation plan.

The irrigation plan and the experiment to determine its need would be up to the plant physiologist, Weiss insisted.

Varga asked, "What's to stop Cal-Am from pumping just a bare minimum, and then doing away with the irrigation plan?"

Weiss insisted that the water management district would oversee the program.

Varga conceded, "I think the experiment is a good idea. I just want to make sure we have a fair experiment."

BRUCE BUEL, general manager of the water management district, said his board had agreed in concept to implement the irrigation and river management plan.

He called on the commission to approve the use permits.

Support for the wells came also from Jack Sassard, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

Stanley Worth, president of the Carmel Area Coalition, also endorsed the wells, although he asked that the commission's approval include a condition that the wells not be used for growth, but only in case of drought.

Homeowner Henry Suval said his property was within 500 feet of one of the four proposed wells.

He expressed concern that the high-volume well would draw the water table below his well.

"We'll either have to hook up to Cal-Am or drill deeper," he said. "Either way it's going to cost us $25,000."

Richard Hughett of the Carmel River Steelhead Association and Carmel River Watch echoed the call for a condition that the wells be used only in time of drought.

Dr. Robert Frost, who lives near the proposed San Carlos well, said the county and water management district should postpone the well project until alternatives are investigated, including desalinization and a larger dam on the Carmel River.

William Woodsworth, a director of the water management district, also called for creation of above-ground sources for more water. He cited evidence of septic tank effluent contaminating the groundwater.

He said, "I shudder to think that we're increasing the potable water supply from a potentially toxic source."

Denial was also recommended by Ed Lee, long-time river expert and a director of the water management district, until irrigation measures are implemented and proven effective.

Henson, who said he represented several property owners with a combined stretch of river frontage of more than a mile, called for an irrigation condition to cover all of Cal-Am's wells.

"The wells are a whole system that should be managed as a whole," he said. "Conditions on the four wells should apply to the whole system of wells."

Commissioner Peters, backed by the county counsel, said that the county had no authority to apply conditions retroactively to wells that the county had already approved.

Henson argued that state environmental law gives the commission the discretion to require whatever conditions it deems reasonable.

Weiss responded for Cal-Am saying, "What you have heard today is a lot of opinions from non-experts."

He noted that the water management district has the authority to provide irrigation measures along the river through a special zone it would create to assess fees to the landowners.

Any attempt to force Cal-Am to irrigate along the length of the river, Weiss said, "would be the same as chasing ghosts that you don't have to."

He maintained that the cost to Cal-Am of irrigating around all its wells would far exceed the cost of the four new wells, making the project unfeasible.

Cal-Am hydrologist Russel Mount addressed the commission on the issue of how wide an area would be affected by the wells and how deep the drawdown would be.

He presented silt samples and diagrams to support his contention that the area of impact could be measured and contained.

Peters explained why protective measures had not been implemented around Cal-Am's existing wells.

He said the comission had required irrigation measures for two of the company's wells, but the Board of Supervisors, in an appeal from Cal-Am, withdrew the provisions. The supervisors used as the basis for their ruling a report submitted by Cal-Am which refuted any need for irrigation.

The CH2M-Hill report, as Peters noted, has since been discounted by experts.

VD victims can find help in the county

By JOANNE HODGEN

VENEREAL DISEASE is no respector of race, color, creed and economic position, according to Billie Humphreys, a public health nurse for Monterey County.

The affluent residents of Carmel are as susceptible to the disease as those in poorer areas, she said.

Among the responsibilities of Mike Kennedy, staff health educator for Monterey County Health Department, is developing public education programs for schools and other areas.

Carmel High School is only one of many schools in the county that benefit from Health Department education programs.

Kennedy said the Health Department will work in schools only when invited. Last year he spoke at Carmel High School twice and had consultations with teachers who preferred to talk to their students.

More than the medical aspects of sexually transmitted diseases are explored, he said. Discussed during the classroom sessions are the students' sexuality, sex roles, their view of relationships and ability to accept responsibility, Kennedy explained.

Sexual diseases are most common in ages 20 to 24, according to Kennedy, though teenage problems are second most prevalent.

The incidence of gonorrhea and syphilis is epidemic compared to other communicable diseases reported to the Health Department, said Kennedy. There were 1,843 gonorrhea cases and 110 syphilis cases reported to the county in 1979. The highest statistic for nonsexual diseases was scarlet fever, with 273 cases reported, according to Kennedy.

Kennedy said that probably only one of five VD cases that private physicians treat is reported — though it is required by law — because many believe it is not the government's business.

There are five sexual diseases that fall under the heading of venereal disease, he said, which include gonorrhea, syphilis and three types that rarely occur in the United States.

"When we talk to classes, we talk about sexually-transmitted diseases and venereal disease is just a part of that," he said.

'The incidence of gonorrhea and syphilis is epidemic compared to other communicable diseases reported to the Health Department, said Kennedy.'

Some of the more common questions, he said, include: "How do I know if I have it?" and "What will happen if I don't get it treated?"

GONORRHEA SYMPTOMS in men include discharge from the penis and pain in the genitals, while women frequently notice no symptoms, Kennedy said.

Eight of 10 men who contact gonorrhea are treated, while the opposite is true of women, according to Kennedy. The result later in life without treatment can be sterility, blindness, and in 10 percent of women, pelvic inflammatory disease, he said.

Syphilis symptoms, according to Kennedy, are initially sores and rashes which may imitate almost any other disease. Though it was true that many syphilitics suffered the degenerative effects in the past, most are now treated and cured with penicillin, he said.

A sexually-transmitted disease that is rapidly increasing is herpes simplex virus 2, with symptoms of lesions and sores in the genital area, he said.

Linked with cervical cancer and congenital mental retardation of infants infected at birth, Herpes, once contracted, will continually recur, according to Kennedy. Unlike syphilis and gonorrhea, herpes 2 is a virus and not a bacteria, and thus cannot be treated with penicillin, he explained.

Symptoms can be treated, but the disease cannot be cured, according to Kennedy.

Kennedy said teenagers who fear they have a sexually transmitted disease may go to a health clinic with the assurance of complete confidentiality.

Mike Kennedy

A state law, he explained, allows anyone 12 and older to visit a health clinic or private physician without parental permission.

Not even a court order can secure the release of a teenager's records, according to Kennedy.

"All venereal diseases have increased in rate because of greater sexual freedom in society," said Kennedy.

Though Monterey County has the fourth highest rate of sexually transmitted diseases in the state, it appears to be leveling off, according to Kennedy.

"Just to be able to hold off the cases is amazing," he said. Though there is no evidence that points to the effectiveness of the county's efforts, Kennedy remarked that it was "safe to say the numbers would increase dramatically" if there were no programs.

He encouraged anyone who may have contracted a sexual disease to phone the Health Department in Seaside at 899-4271, Monterey at 373-0111 or Salinas at 1-757-1061.

Middle School sports scene is revitalized

THE BALL is rolling again for intramural sports at Carmel Middle School.

After two years of financial cutbacks that led to near-elimination of after-school sports, the school has scheduled an ambitious program this year.

Principal Nick Nicholson said the response from students has been overwhelming.

The turnout for flag football was so good, in fact, that the team now has a seven-game schedule with other schools and its own cheerleader squad. The coach is substitute teacher Richard Molen.

Coed soccer, co-sponsored with the YMCA, drew more than 270 children at the league opening Oct. 4, Nicholson said. Teams will be formed by grade levels, with competition including students from other schools.

Girls' volleyball and a major track and field competition are also planned, Nicholson noted.

The after-school program also includes a school Frisbee team, coached by gym teacher Chris Browning.

"We're putting it all together on a shoestring budget," Nicholson noted.

TEACHERS ARE volunteering their time to coach the teams, he said. The school Parents Club is providing some money from the magazine subscription drive it sponsors each year.

The return to sports has presented some unforeseen expenses and complications.

Nicholson said that flag football required dolomite chalking of the lines on the field, an unexpected expense of $60. Because Middle School has the best football field, he said that six of the seven games are scheduled at home.

"We have a football team, so now we need cheerleaders, but we don't have an adviser for a cheerleader squad," Nicholson said. Despite the technicality, tryouts have already been held for cheerleaders, he said.

"We may not look like the Dallas Cowboys, but we'll be there."

Football season looks even longer with quarterback out

By ELIZABETH SARET

CARMEL HIGH began its league season Oct. 3 with a loss to Gonzales.

Matt Nottenkamper threw Todd Bleisner a six-yard touchdown pass. Harry Lewis ran seven yards for the other CHS touchdown. Carmel had 12 penalties for 175 yards.

Quarterback Nottenkamper was injured in practice Oct. 8 and will be out the rest of the season with a broken collar bone.

Carmel faces Palma High School at Salinas Municipal Stadium at 2 p.m. tomorow.

THE CROSS-COUNTRY TEAM has an 0-1 record in the league.

Carmel will host its next meet, against Robert Louis Stevenson and King City High Schools, at 2 this afternoon.

Coach Bob Brooks said, "Since the number two runner cannot run and most of the varsity team is made up of sophomores, chances are not as good as they could be."

THE GIRLS' TENNIS team's overall record is 5-1.

padre sports

Its league standing is 2.0.

On Oct. 6 the junior varsity team played a practice match against the Monterey varsity team. Carmel did not do as well as expected. On Oct. 8, Carmel lost another practice match against Leland High School, 2-5. On Oct. 13th Carmel High hosts a match against Monterey High School.

THE WATER POLO team is 1-0 in its league, beating Robert Louis Stevenson 13-6.

Bryan Baldwin scored six goals, John Agan scored two, Mike LaFontaine scored two and Don Williams, Sean Mullen and Bill McCreery scored one each. Goalie David Mason played an exceptionally good game.

On Oct. 3 and 4, the junior varsity team played in a tournament at Harbor High in Santa Cruz. It took fourth place, winning two and losing two. Eight teams were involved.

On Oct. 8, the varsity team beat Salinas High 10-1 in a practice meet.

CARMEL HIGH'S GIRLS' swim team moves up two mo notches this week towards its 100th victory in 10 years.

The decade's record is 95-1. This season the team is 5-0. Carmel defeated Monterey High on Oct.7.

Kristina Neill won the 200 freestyle and the 100 butterfly. Kerry Neill won the 100 freestyle and the 100 breaststroke. Kira Garrett won the 50 and 500 freestyle.

Carmel defeated Pacific Grove High Oct. 9 for its fifth victory of the season, 109-43. Kerry Neill set a new record of 5:22.38 in the varsity 500 freestyle,and Kristina Neill set a new record of 30.31 in the 50-yard backstroke. Carmel hosts its next match tomorrow against Hollister High.

THE PADRE girl's volleyball team is now 3-1 in league play. It defeated King City 13-15, 15-7, 15-5 Oct. 10.

Setting and spiking by fourth-year player Daphne Hougard keyed the win, as did serving and spiking by fourth-year player Dana Hunter and blocking and spiking by fourth-year player Ana Williams and third-year player Wendy Wagstaff.

The team appears very strong. The coach is Bruce Standard.

Golf tourney starts today

The heat is on for the Northern California Golf Association 13th annual Two-Man Better Ball Championship Oct. 16-17, as 60 teams have already passed two rigorous qualifying tests. They will meet for more stiff competition beginning at 8 a.m. both days at Spyglass Hill Golf Course, Spyglass Hill and Stevenson Drive, Pebble Beach.

Defending champions Phil Mastagni and Manny Fagundes of Modesto have already been sidelined, leaving this year's event a wide-open chase.

All teams have advanced through club and sectional qualifying tournaments to earn the right to challenge the imposing Spyglass tract.

Pre-tournament favorites, based on sectional qualifying scores, are golfers representing Davis, Kings, River Island, Round Hill, San Ramon, and Walnut Creek golf and country clubs.

Teams from as far north as Arcata and as far south as Porterville will compete in the 36-hole event, NCGA president Charles Seaver from Sunnyside Country Club in Fresno is tournament chairman.

Admission is free and everyone is invited to spectate. For additional information, phone 625-4653.

Fred Sorri speaks to the Community Hospital Auxiliary.

Hospital auxiliary elects

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

MEMBERS of the Community Hospital Auxiliary held their annual fall meeting at Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club Oct. 4.

"What more marvelous or appropriate way could there be for the auxiliary to celebrate the hospital's 50th anniversary than to announce that the organization's board of directors has approved a pledge of $250,000 to Community Hospital's Outpatient Pavilion Building Fund," said Auxiliary President Mrs. Frederick O. Capen.

"The gift, the largest single one in the auxiliary's 25-year history, will be paid over a five-year period, commencing in December of this year."

Mrs. Capen said the auxiliary hopes that announcement of the pledge would generate additional donations from the community.

Featured speaker at the meeting was the hospital's director of public relations and development, Fred Sorri, whose topic, Exploring Outpatient Pavilion, provided the auxiliary with an overview of the new building's place in the hospital's plans.

"The building will not only allow consolidation of outpatient care, but will provide space for 15 key hospital departments that are now severely crowded," Sorri said.

He said that groundbreaking for the new outpatient pavilion should be completed 15 months later.

He explained that services to be provided in the new wing would include clinical laboratory, blood bank, outpatient X-ray, heart testing and something brand new — the family birthing center with home-like delivery rooms.

Sorri explained that spaces to be vacated by those departments will be taken over by other crowded departments including intensive care and respiratory therapy.

According to Sorri, Community Hospital treated 28,000 outpatients in 1970. "This year the number is expected to be 75,000," he said, adding that the occupancy rate for inpatients has averaged more than 90 percent.

"The hospital's laboratory will expand to 5,600 square feet," Sorri said. "In 1974 the lab ran 245,000 tests. By last year the number had grown to 412,000."

Regarding the expanded blood bank, Sori said that in its first year of operation (1973), it drew 148 units of blood. This year the figure is expected to approach 4,000, he said.

The occupational therapy department will move to the outpatient pavilion and will feature a spacious area complete with fully-equipped kitchen, he said.

"People using this service are physically impaired and need the help to learn to become independent," Sorri said.

The new outpatient pavilion will add 41,000 square feet to the hospital, and the remodeling project within the present hospital will cover 7,300 square feet. Recently revised construction costs are estimated at $6.4 million, with the overall expansion including purchase of new equipment, site development and professional fees expected to be $8.5 million.

"Cost of the new construction will be $132.72 per square foot — which is 10 percent below the present average cost for hospital construction in Northern California," said Sorri.

Sorri thanked the auxiliary volunteers for their services and gifts over the years, and saluted them for the role they play in public relations.

MRS. CAPEN honored members who had reached important plateaus of service during 1980.

She displayed a large framed scroll listing the honored members. The scroll will be on display throughout the year.

Honored for 20 year's service was Libby Durein.

Receiving honors for 15 years' service were Gertrude Geer, Clarice Kahr and Helen Westland.

Those receiving 10-year honors were Lilliam Adams, Bettina Hand, Florence LaMay, Dolores Robertson, Magdalena "Babe" Taylor, Margo Toy, Jean Warriner and Pat Zannetta.

The auxiliary elected officers for the coming year.

Elected were: Mrs. Gordon P. Smith of Carmel Valley, president; Mrs. Leslie A. Welge of Pebble Beach, president-elect; Mrs. Richard M. Schnal of Carmel, secretary; Mrs. Gerald F. Ridley of Pacific Grove, treasurer; Mrs. George J. Thaler of Carmel, active membership director, and Mrs. Alan C. Lisser of Carmel and Mrs. Edward F. Solliday of Monterey, nominating committee, 1981-82.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 80-18

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTION 3305 (f) OF THE UNIFORM BUILDING CODE TO ALLOW SPIRAL STAIRWAYS WITH CLEAR WALKING AREA OF 21 INCHES UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS.

THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

1122.13 AMENDMENT. That Section 3305 (f) of the Uniform Building Code is amended by the addition of a new paragraph which shall read as follows:

Exception. In Group R, Division 3 and in private 1, Occupancies, Spiral Stairways may be installed with clear walking area of 21 inches provided all of the following conditions are met:

1. All other requirements of Section 3305 (f) are complied with.
2. That the stairway shall not be the primary exit from the area served.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF CARMEL-BY-THE SEA THIS 6th day of October, 1980, by the following roll call vote:

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 80-19

AN ORDINANCE EXTENDING FOR EIGHT MONTHS INTERIM ORDINANCE NO. 80-8 PROHIBITING TIME SHARE PROJECTS PENDING STUDY AND ADOPTION OF TIME SHARE REGULATIONS

WHEREAS, Interim Zoning Ordinance No. 80-8 was adopted by the City Council on June 9, 1980; and

WHEREAS, Government Code 65858 authorizes extending the ordinance for eight months after public hearing; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for adopting interim zoning ordinance no. 80-8 still exists and more time is needed to study time share projects and adopt permanent regulations; and

WHEREAS, a duly noticed public hearing on the question of extending interim ordinance no. 80-8 was held on October 1980;

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Interim Zoning Ordinance no. 80-8 entitled INTERIM ZONING ORDINANCE PROHIBITING TIME SHARE PROJECTS PENDING STUDY AND ADOPTION OF TIME SHARE REGULATIONS adopted June 9, 1980 is extended for eight months to midnight, June 8, 1981.

Section 2. The Interim Ordinance as extended prohibits conversion of the use of real property to time sharing projects or the creation of time sharing projects, uses or estates in connection with real property. A "time sharing project" means any real property which may become subject to a time sharing program of any kind.

Section 3. The adoption of this Ordinance is required for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety, in that the City proposes to consider enacting changes in the present zoning regulations, as they relate to time sharing projects. These changes, it is deemed, are needed urgently to provide for regulation of development and creation of real estate time sharing projects. The City Council therefore adopts this Ordinance to avoid the frustration of the purpose of the proposed changes during the interim period of study, and to prevent unfair economic advantage to any persons able to make developments in these areas at this time.

Section 4. This Ordinance shall become effective immediately upon its passage and adoption, in that it is required for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF CARMEL-BY-THE SEA THIS 6th day of October, 1980, by the following roll call vote:

ZONING GIVES PROTECTION

Effective November 6, Carmel Point and the Highlands have a zoning ordinance that safeguards their residential integrity.

The county board of supervisors, with the initiative of the county planning commission, has passed a law that should make every property owner in these two districts breathe more freely. Hotels, apartment houses, bungalow courts, commercial uses, auto camps, public garages and service stations, crowding of lots with dwellings, even signboards of undue size, are all prohibited from encroachment here.

CARMEL BOOS DAYLIGHT SAVING

There are opportunities for all sorts of phobists to add a bit to our state's organic law at the November elections. The test of our sanity, and of the common-sense of the people of the state, is in picking out of the mess the very few proposals that have merit, and voting the others into oblivion.

The silliest amendment proposed is that of daylight saving. Punching the clock forward and back an hour, so that people may be fooled into arising an hour earlier during the summer months, is our idea of kindergarten legislation.

PACIFIC GROVE GOES GOLFY

We are informed on good authority that Pacific Grove has gone and done it again. Taken one more step in its wild career toward grabbing the spotlight and balancing the books with Carmel.

Pacific Grove has gone not only Little Golf mad, but has in its own playful way forged far ahead in originality. A banker is tearing down his stone building to put a Goofie Golf course in its place. "Safer than a bank!" he cries, scribbling figures on the margin of yesterday's paper.

But the best comes now. A church has seen the glint of gold, and, while their lease prevents wrecking their building, they have rented the vacant lot next door and are installing the swellest Dippy Dappy you ever beheld. And how are they going to combine that with church, you ask?

They're going to give coupons when you play on the course. The coupons entitle you and one friend to enter the church at the next service.

Is A Problem Drinker Making Life Unbearable For You?

• Read Every Word

If a problem drinker is making life unbearable, you alone know what you've suffered. And you alone can do something about it. Remember . . . you can help the problem drinker even if he or she doesn't want help.

• What Not to Do

Don't accuse – he or she will never admit to drinking too much. Don't try to reason with the problem drinker. Alcohol abusers are seriously ill, and the illness affects the mind as well as the body.

• What You Can Do

The best thing (and really the only thing) you can do for problem drinkers is to get them to professional help. Fast. The CareUnit Program in your local hospital offers a unique program that works. We prove it every day. In a few weeks, the problem drinker can look forward to resuming a useful and productive place in society. And you can look forward to a happy, normal life once again.

• How to Begin

Begin by calling your local CareUnit immediately, and talk to a staff counselor. You alone can help the alcoholic. Call now – before your situation gets even worse!

Editorial

Readers' responsibility

By LENNY LEVINE

AN EDITORIAL written for National Newspaper Week — which is this week — is expected to extol the virtues of a free press and the people's right to know.

Yes, we are fortunate to be one of the few nations to indeed have a free press. The power of the press helped coalesce Colonial Americans to be rid of the British yoke. More recently, a free press helped topple our government, one that had become so arrogant it forgot its power came from the people.

Yes, we are proud to guard the First Amendment guarantee of the people's right to know.

But we can't guard it alone. It's a two-way street.

We need to know what you think.

Letters to the editor are one way you can maintain a free press. It's your forum.

What are public officials doing right? What are they doing wrong?

Let us know.

A whole lot of pleasure

mayor's report

I WAS HAPPY that the City Council voted unanimously to put the Piccadilly Nursery property ownership on the April ballot for the public to decide whether it should be retained or sold.

I feel that is the only fair way to deal with this kind of a situation.

THE COUNCIL voted also to extend a moratorium on time-sharing for another eight months.

For those who are not familiar with time-sharing, it enables several people to group together to buy weekly or monthly periods of a piece of property on an annual basis. There are many questions not answered yet with regard to the effect that would have on a city like Carmel and, until we have much more legal information, it is best that we keep the moratorium in effect.

I'M VERY HAPPY to welcome as new members to the Library Board, Bernard Anderson, and to the Cultural Commission, Roger Fermier.

I'm sure both of those gentlemen will devote the necessary time and conscientious work to expedite the tasks required of those groups.

I WAS ALSO PLEASED that the council voted unanimously to allocate $500 for the necessary work on preliminary plans for proposed restrooms and covered bus shelter at Devendorf Park.

It was agreed that this be put on a competitive basis among architects, designers and students of architecture to submit their ideas. I hope we will have a good response, giving the council and Planning Commission a choice in the matter.

Consideration must be given to the least amount of bulk in the structure and the best use of land in Devendorf Park. Design in keeping with Carmel and practicality of use are essential.

Entries should be presented to City Hall by Nov. 15. May the best person win!

I HAD THE PLEASURE last week of welcoming to our community the Rev. James Brown, who will be pastor of Community Church in Carmel Valley.

I was most pleased to see that representatives of many denominations were also invited as guests for the welcoming service. It is gratifying to see that people of diverse beliefs can assemble and break bread in the spirit of togetherness.

The world could profit from more of that kind of constructive effort.

SOME CITY COUNCIL members, Doug Peterson and I will be representing the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea at the League of California Cities' annual meeting in Los Angeles Oct. 19 to 22.

These meetings are for elected and appointed city officials to become better acquainted with and more knowledgeable about city management and new and pending legislation affecting cities of all sizes.

HOPE YOU attended the fireman's muster and enjoyed the competitive spirit that reigned over the day's events.

Pine knots:

Son of Hatton Canyon

By AL EISNER

THE PROPOSED HATTON Canyon Freeway is like a slumbering volçano.

Every once in a great while, it erupts into the consciousness of the people in the Carmel/Carmel Valley area. It arouses passionate debate. Nothing is resolved. It then recedes for a while until its slumber is once again disturbed.

The highly controversial freeway project popped up in the news again this week when the Carmel City Council voted unanimously to ask the state of California to consider alternative means of alleviating traffic on the stretch of Highway 1 between Rio Road on the south and Carpenter Street at the top of Carmel Hill on the north.

The city fathers (and mother) were asked to give their advice to the state Transportation Commission which is scheduled to meet Oct. 22 to ponder the wisdom of spending more than $10 million to build the freeway in Hatton Canyon.

The state owns the right-of-way in the canyon (which lies parallel and just east of Highway 1) and intends to build a freeway. The project has been described in other terms at various times, but the state intends to build a freeway — not a parkway, not a roadway, not a highway, not anything else except a freeway. Well-intentioned folks who think a "scenic highway" would be appropriate in the canyon may not be aware that a freeway can — of course — also be a scenic highway.

DEVELOPMENT-ORIENTED property owners, engineers, builders, and their paid representatives have been pushing mightily for decades to try to get the freeway built.

They understand all too well that the lovely, rich land in Carmel Valley that is ripe for development could stay in its pristine state if something is not done to uncork the traffic situation on that stretch of Carmel Hill. Some "no-growth" hard-liners keep planting mines in the path of freeway advocates because they are aware that it could speed development in Carmel Valley.

DOES ANYONE REALLY KNOW what is proposed in the Canyon? As far as I know, the plans I saw in 1972 have not been altered. They call for the freeway to continue south from Carpenter Street at the top of the hill and to empty onto Rio Road at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Massive cutting and filling would be required . . . just like in the old days when California proceeded willy-nilly with freeway construction at the urging of the trucking lobby. The majestic pine trees at the north end of the canyon would be buried under 75 feet of fill . . . yes, 75 feet!

And what does Caltrans have in mind for us at Rio Road? A Los Angeles-type intersection, folks, complete with cloverleaf and all the destruction that comes with it.

A Caltrans engineer confessed to me almost 10 years ago that he knew the grade in the canyon area would exceed freeway standards (that means it's too steep) but that is was necessary and proper becaue the freeway was so badly needed.

When I was somewhat younger (but no less passionate in my desire to preserve the fabled beauty of the Carmel area) I wrote in the Pine Cone:

"The need for caution was underscored this week by the ghastly accident on the Pacheco Pass near Gilroy. A 16-wheel semi-trailer went out of control coming down the western side of the pass, jack-knifed and smashed into three other large trucks, two pickup trucks and five passenger cars resulting in five deaths and injuries to eight others. Rescue workers said it took four hours to pry some of the victims out of the wreckage. We need a road that's safe and attractive and one that will cause little permanent damage to the canyon."

THE CARMEL CITY COUNCIL suggests that the right-of-way be used only for northbound traffic and that the existing Highway 1 be used only for southbound vehicles. I don't know whether that's feasible. State officials have said, in the past, that the idea was not practical.

(Long-time Pine Cone readers may recall that I once proposed tunneling under Carmel Hill at the top of Ocean Avenue because high school students trying to navigate between on-rushing cars and trucks were endangered. I stated then that the real problem was not the volume of traffic, but the two traffic signals at Ocean and Carpenter . . . if we could bypass those, then, well . . . crazier and less expensive ideas have been adopted, haven't they?)

When the five members of the City Council ponder the matter, they are aware of two conflicting forces: Many residents of San Carlos are unhappy because their street is heavily used by autos and trucks trying to bypass traffic on Highway 1. The councilmen are also aware that construction of the freeway would unleash development in Carmel Valley, creating vastly greater amounts of traffic, air pollution, etc. Those effects would create far greater problems for the citizens of Carmel in the long run.

MANY CALIFORNIA COMMUNITIES are begging for freeways. Construction prices are soaring and the funds are getting scarcer. Right here in Monterey County, improvements are needed for Highway 101 near Prunedale. Improvement is required for the Monterey-Salinas Highway. The four-lane portion of Highway 1 ends at Castroville, creating problems in North County.

The Highway Commission has heard from thousands of people in the San Jose area who want Highway 101 improved to stop the carnage. In Southern California, of course, there are requests for dozens of freeways and freeway additions.

Then there's Carmel. We don't like freeways. Many of us are aware that freeways don't alleviate traffic — they just re-direct it. Sometimes they make it worse. Freeways can induce growth prematurely.

Freeways are in opposition to the Carmel "idea." The citizens of this area chose an unhurried lifestyle. We want tranquility, not more traffic. We want to be able to get from Point "A" to Point "B" safely and with reasonable speed, but don't want overpasses and wide, paved roads.

Now THAT'S Carmel!

City purchases one lot for proposed library annex at price tag of $175,000

By STEVE HELLMAN

AN AGREEMENT has been reached between the city of Carmel and James Thompson to buy one of his lots next to Harrison Memorial Library.

Thompson said yesterday that the city agreed to buy the lot for $175,000.

The sale caps several months of wrangling over Thompson's two lots, which the city has sought for the purpose of constructing an annex to the library. The lots are on the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth.

The City Council discussed the matter during executive session at its meeting Tuesday, Oct. 13, then directed City Attorney George Brehmer to negotiate with Thompson instead of pursuing condemnation on the lots. The city had previously offered Thompson $135,000 and $140,000 for his two lots, which he refused.

Thompson said he decided to sell one lot and retain the other after it was determined that the library needed only one lot for the proposed 14,500-square-foot annex.

He said the lots had been appraised at $200,000 each. Two cottages of historical value are located on each lot, and are currently occupied by senior citienns.

Thompson said he has agreed to move the seniors into other rental units he owns.

The two 1910 portable cottages from Ohio that will have to be removed from the lot will be taken apart and reconstructed on one of his other properties, Thompson said.

Teach them early

Dear Editor:

Perhaps "Johnny can't read" because parents are too busy, there's too much TV, he's too lazy, or says he can learn when he goes to school.

Does he have alphabet blocks to play with? I doubt it, as I seldom see them in toy departments or advertisements. If he does have any, does his mother teach him the letters and sounds? Does she take him on her lap as she reads a story at bedtime, so that he can follow the words as she reads? I doubt it. Thus three vital years are lost.

Children are inquisitive and eager to learn, especially from 2 to 5 years of age. I know of two children — far from geniuses — who were reading the newspaper at 2½ years old, not because they were interested in the contents, but because it was fun to read new words.

Some years ago a theory in the schools was against memorizing the alphabet. Why training the memory was injurious I can't imagine.

This happened in our school office: Two high school juniors helping at the end of the term, and their job was to file some record cards. One said under her breath, "Do you know the alphabet?" The other answered, "No, but I have it written on this piece of paper."

Then the theory of Flash Cards came along. It was supposedly wrong to learn the sounds of the letters.

Parents, please don't cheat your children. Begin to teach them basics early, when they are so curious to learn about everything, and ask "What's that?" over and over again.

It's fun for them and fun for you, and so very rewarding.

Fiscal conservatism

Dear Editor:

Everyone is talking about "fiscal conservatism."

If you're running for office this season and you're not running on "fiscal conservatism" you're dead. You can't run for student-body treasurer, or for the salamander monitoring board without touting your "fiscal conservatism."

My happiness will be complete when someone can tell me unambiguously what "fiscal conservatism" is.

Anne Welchner, a candidate for the Assembly, says she's a "fiscal conservative." She claims that her opponent, Sam Farr, is not.

For his part, Farr has not yet made a big deal out of "fiscal conservatism." But he has pointed out, quietly and sanely, that he was the only member of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors who voted against every county budget that would have necessitated increasing the tax rate. He also managed to get nearly $3 million from the road improvement fund surplus transferred to the general fund, resulting in a reduction in the tax rate in 1976-77. That was even before Proposition 13 put "fiscal conservatism" in every other politician's mouth.

What has Mrs. Welchner done in the last few years in the way of "fiscal conservatism"?

If Supervisor Farr continues to show good sense and refrain from the term "fiscal conservatism," he'll get my vote.

So mum's the word, Sam.

Praise for teachers

Dear Editor:

As president of the Associated Carmel Teachers, I am writing to express our appreciation for the recent article about our colleague, Peter Lyon.

Lyon is indeed one of our outstanding educators, but there are many others in our district.

One of my goals this year is to do whatever possible to improve the image of the teachers in our district. I feel that the morale of our teachers is at an all-time low. Proposition 13, declining enrollments, administration changes and other factors have led to the feelings that continue to exist.

I feel that by working together, our morale can be greatly improved this year. Through our association I hope to improve morale by working closely with our new superintendent, keeping our school board informed of our concerns and uniting the teachers in our district.

We need to voice and share our mutual problems. After all, our foremost and primary interest is to continue offering quality education to all the students in our district.

We constantly hear and read about the negative side of our students. However, I dare to say that there is also a very positive side to many of our kids and to the unseen forces that motivate this other side, namely, the CUSD teachers.

Through your fine newspaper I am well aware of your interest in printing pertintent school news.

Future articles about our students and about our teachers will have a tremendous impact on not just improving the image and morale of our teachers, but also on the way that our community views and understands the current problems facing our schools.

A vote for Farr

Dear Editor:

I sat in the audience during a recent interim hearing of the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee held at the City Council chambers in Monterey.

The committee was receiving testimony on AB 3436. This bill, offered by Assemblyperson Maxine Waters, deals with gag orders on criminal proceedings. The Criminal Justice Committee often holds meetings in conjunction with the State Bar convention to maximize the testimony it receives from judges and lawyers. Such was the case here.

I was appalled to hear the comments of Ann Welchner, candidate for the 28th Assembly District, on a radio news program calling the meeting a "legislative boondoggle" because the public had not been invited. She went on to comment that residents should have been invited to comment on criminal justice matters. What I find so appalling is Ms. Welchner's obvious ignorance of the California legislative process. Interim hearings on a specific bill are always a matter of public record. Publication of the lists of bills set for hearing gives notice to interested parties, including the general public, of the date and time when they may wish to appear before the committee to offer arguments for or against a bill. Such was the hearing I attended. Were anyone to address issues other than those concerning the bill at hand, he would have been ruled out of order. It is essential for the public to have access to the legislature, but it is also essential that the proper procedures be observed.

The position of representing the public in Sacramento is an important full-time job. I believe that we, the citizens of the 28th Assembly District, as responsible employers should cast our vote Nov. 4 for the person best qualified for the job.

I believe that person is Sam Farr.

Favors a dam

Dear Editor:

The Lower Carmel Valley Advisory Committee strongly urges that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District offer to district voters an early opportunity to vote whether they want a small to medium size dam at the San Clemente site on the Carmel River.

The ballot measure should ensure the least possible cost to present consumers through connection charges for new customers, provisions for natural flows for fish releases, that storage should not be included solely for fishery enhancement and maintenance of the highest feasible water table in the aquifer and the largest feasible and cost-effective stream flow below the dam.

The dam project would provide the best and least costly means of rejuvenating the river banks and channel, both of which have been damaged by exporting water from the aquifer; of enhancing the beneficial uses of water, and of putting to constructive use the peak flows that now go into the sea.

The committee believes that this ballot measure would gain voter approval and that it would provide maximum benefit to the residents of the entire Monterey Peninsula and particularly to those of Carmel and Carmel Valley.

NANCY MULLER (left), Judith Shoaff, Catherine Iwaniw, Karen Hurll, Carol Thwaite, David Bondio, Debra Force, Steffany-Lynn Stearns, Judith Denman and Tricia Vandor perform in the Ohio ballet production of Concerto Barocco. Choreography is by George Balanchine.

Ohio Ballet to open Festival of Dance

The Ohio Ballet opens the Ninth Annual Carmel Festival of Dance season Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center Theater, Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

Reviews of the company are unanimous. They praise their captivating repertory and the classically inspired ballets of artistic director Heinz Poll.

"If you think the Cincinnati Reds and the Cleveland Orchestra are Ohio's only top-notch experts, you'll think again when you see the Ohio Ballet," writes a critic in The Boston Globe.

The program will include the Schubert Waltzes, Summer Night, Frederic Chopin's Concerto No. 1 in E Minor, Opus 11, Romanze; Scenes from Childhood, with music by Robert Schumann, including Kinddrscenen, Opus 15; from music of Handel, exerpts from Concerti Grossi in D, F, and Jeptha will be presented in a piece titled Aureole.

The ballet first came to prominence when they were asked to appear at Spoleto Festival USA in 1978. They made their first triumphant coast-to-coast tour the following year.

This is an outstanding company, unpretentious, meticulously trained and presented in exquisite taste . . . an amalgam of pure movement, music, costuming and lighting. It has a creative impetus and an artistic coherence. In all, their progress is considered remarkable for a ballet company that is less than 10 years old. Their performance at the pre-eminent summer dance festival at Jacob's Pillow in Massachusetts attests to this.

Artistic director Heinz Poll was born in Oberhausen, Germany. He was educated as a scholarship student at the Folkwang School in Essen and bred as a professional soloist at the Stadt Theater in Goettingen and Berlin Stage Opera Ballet. He established himself as a dancer, teacher, and choreographer with the National Ballet of Chile and Ballet de la Jeunesse Musicales de France. The company has also caught the eye of a growing circle of choreographers: Gerald Arpino, Ruthanna Boris, Robert Joffrey, Kathryn Posin, Paul Taylor and Anna Sokolow have works in the company's repertory.

The New York Times claims that the Ohio Ballet is "the best news in dance this season."

Tickets, available through 5 p.m. Monday, Oct. 20, are $6.75 and $7.75 per performance, and season tickets are $24 and $28. All tickets must be purchased before the performances at Sunset Center, Carmel between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Everyone is invited to attend. For further information, phone 624-3996.

A PERFECT UNION is achieved by Marsha Maurer and Christopher Stygar in the Ohio Ballet performance of Summer Night. The famed company will grace the stage of Carmel's Sunset Center Theater Tuesday, Oct. 20 at 8 p.m.

THOUSANDS OF costumed schoolchildren will pay homage to the yearly arrival of the Monarch butterflies Saturday, Oct. 18 at 10 a.m. in the 41st annual Butterfly Parade through the streets of Pacific Grove.

Parade celebrates Monarchs' return

As thousands of fluttering orange and black Monarch butterflies return to Pacific Grove, more than 1,500 school children will join in the 41st annual Butterfly Parade Saturday, Oct. 18 to celebrate the Monarch's annual winter visit.

The costumed marchers, each group in distinctive dress, will step off at 10 a.m. from the grounds of Robert Down School, 485 Pine Ave. The parade will march down Fountain Avenue to Lighthouse, then left to 17th, left again to Pine and left once more to Grand, then right to Spruce and back to school. The parade lasts about one hour.

The traditional bazaar and carnival following the parade will be held at 11 a.m. at the Pacific Grove Middle School sports field, located at Sinex and Fountain.

The bazaar, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Associations of the schools in the Pacific Grove Unified School District, will offer a flea market, country store, pumpkin patch, door prizes and games, and home-cooked food.

Pacific Grove is known as "Butterfly Town, U.S.A." because hundreds of thousands of Monarch butterflies annually migrate to winter in groves of trees in the city.

Sunset Views

'Bright and snappy Ohio Ballet' to open festival

By RICHARD TYLER

THREE STELLAR performances will have taken place in these early weeks of the new fall season at Sunset Center.

On Oct. 6, the Chamber Music Society presented as its opening attraction the world famous Tokyo String Quartet. The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in its first appearance at Sunset Center Oct. 13 had the help of the Maurine Church Coburn Charitable Trust in presenting Horacio Gutierrez as piano soloist.

On Tuesday, Oct. 21, the Carmel Festival of Dance will present the Ohio Ballet as the first artists in its series.

Perhaps the best way to introduce this company is through the reviews that it has received in some of its major engagements.

Anna Kisselgoff in the New York Times writes: "One of the most pleasant surprises of the dance season has turned out to be the Ohio Ballet. For those of us who missed the troupe's recent debuts at Jacob's Pillow, the New York Dance Festival and Spoleto, U.S.A., the performances were a good way to catch up on a company that is sure to make its mark beyond a purely regional framework. The astounding aspect of this young group was its professionalism. It was a quality that extended not only to the choreography of its founder-artistic director, Heinz Poll, and its production aspects supervised by Thomas Skelton, a well-known New York lighting designer who is also the Ohio Ballet's associate director, but also to the dancing itself. From what one has seen and heard, it is clear that despite its geographical identification as the Ohio Ballet, the company is really a creative instrument for Mr. Poll as teacher and choreographer.

"As a choreographer, his impulse is toward the romantic and lyrical. It is dangerous to generalize after just one viewing, but it would be very surprising if Mr. Poll's artistic profile turned out to be otherwise. The overall shape of the company, however, is completed by contemporary works by both modern dance and ballet choreographers such as Paul Taylor, Kathryn Posin, Gerald Arpino, Anna Sokolow, Robert Joffrey and Ruthanna Boris. As a matter of description rather than value judgment, it would be possible to see something of Eliot Feld Ballet and the Joffrey Ballet in the Ohio Ballet which turns out to be uniquely itself.

"The dancers are more exuberant than Mr. Feld's. Mr. Poll, a German-born dancer who came to the United States with the Chilean Ballet in 1964, established a school, the Dance Institute in Akron. He formed a workshop group, The Chamber Ballet, later renamed the Ohio Chamber Ballet. Mr. Skelton, invited to do the lighting, liked what he saw and helped transform the ensemble in 1974 into the professional company called The Ohio Ballet. It now has 18 dancers and three apprentices and is resident at the University of Akron. It also has a creative impetus and an artistic coherence. In all, remarkable progress for a ballet company that is less than 10 years old."

IT WAS MARILYN TUCKET in the San Francisco Chronicle who first said: "Just when one thinks that the dance world must surely have exhausted itself, something like the bright and snappy Ohio Ballet comes along to prove that there is still much more out there to behold.

"Ohio? Yes, Ohio Ballet, a company which is in residence at the University of Akron. Having first come to prominence at the Spoleto Festival, the company made is first coast-to-coast tour last year to bravos from all who saw them.

"The dancers are exquisitely trained; the lighting and visual effects are superb."

The Boston Globe, reviewing the company at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival had this to say: "If you think the Cincinnati Reds and the Cleveland Orchestra are Ohio's only top-notch exports, you'll think again when you see the Ohio Ballet, which I urge you to do.

"As if the Ohio Ballet's title alone wasn't sufficiently unprepossessing, the company's home is Akron, a city which chauvinistic Easterners tend to dismiss with remarks about tires. But the small (20 members) and young (born in 1968) Ohio Ballet, which is in residence at the University of Akron, defies geographical stereotypes with the most creative approach to classical dance I've seen all season."

THE PROGRAM to be given at Sunset Theater will include the following:

Schubert Waltzes premiered May 16, 1975, and is made possible, in part, by a grant from the Ohio Arts Council, with the music of Schubert, Waltzes, Opus 9.

Summer Night premiered in March, 1974, with the music of Frederic Chopin, Concerto No. 1 in E Minor, Opus 11, Romanze.

Scenes From Childhood was made possible by a gift from Mrs. Charles Herberich and premiered in 1977. The music is that of Robert Schumann, Kinddrscenen, Opus 15.

Aureole, first performed by the Paul Taylor Dance Company in 1962, was made possible for the Ohio Ballet under a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. The ballet, choreographed by Paul Taylor, is to music of Handel, excerpts from Concerti Grossi in D, F, and Jeptha. The other three dances have been choreographed by Heinz Poll, the artistic director of the company.

The musical director of the company, David Fisher, will be at the piano. He has performed as piano soloist with the Akron, Chautauqua and Columbus symphony orchestras. In 1977, he was appointed musical director of the Ohio Ballet.

Some tickets are still available for this performance. For more information, call the director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996.

YOU CAN attend Helldorado Day at Tombstone, Az., Oct. 17. There is also a Scottish Festival in Stone Mountain Park, Ga., through Oct. 19. Hong Kong will play host to an Asian Arts Festival until Nov. 3. And, not to be outdone, Singapore will present the Festival of the Nine Emperor Gods with street opera and fire walking at the same time. There will also be the Festival of Eras at the Heian Shrine in Kyoto, Japan, Oct. 22.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

DUPLICATE THE DANGER

You, White, roll 4-4 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

It would be foolish to hit the two blots in your home board, giving up your 6-point and 5-point. This would just move Black forward and make it easier for him to get out.

You must begin by moving your two runners to Black's 5-point. Then move in from the 8-point to the 4-point and bring one man down from your midpoint to your 9-point.

If Black rolls a one he can hit the blot on your midpoint, but he also wants to cover his blot on your 2-point. He cannot do both unless he rolls double one.

In the recommended position, only a one helps Black. If you bring both men down from your midpoint, Black can use a six as well as a one. You have no control over what your opponent rolls, but you can limit the usefulness of his rolls by "duplicating" his good numbers.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

1978: an outstanding year for Cabernet Sauvignon

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

THE TRADITION of laying down vintage wines of the birth years of children has been an English custom for as long as we can remember.

A "21st" celebration is forever one of more pomp and circumstance than Christmas. More often than not it is a black-tie affair.

We've attended more than one in London's posh Connaught Rooms and, with all the guests, eagerly looked forward to the pouring of the 21-year-old toasting wine. It was often a rich and bronze-edged vintage port. There's safety for sure in keeping qualities of such brandy-laced wines. But clarets, too, of the substantial Cabernet Sauvignon grape, can often be at peak perfection with those significant 21 years of age on them. Burgundies, of Pinot noir origins, can stand the age handsomely, but truly fine ones are as rare as the banner years.

A Santa Barbara physician writes: "My wife and I had a daughter in late September of 1979. We are thinking about buying a case of wine, hoping to age this somewhere between 18 and 21 years of the 1979 vintage. It is my understanding that there was a superior harvest of grapes for Cabernet Sauvignon wines. I am unaware as to whether there have been any wine tastings yet of these Cabernets.

"I would appreciate information regarding whether you think these wines will age well for the period of time that we are anticipating. Beyond this, I would appreciate any recommendations you might have to make regarding which vineyards seem to be getting the best reviews for tastings."

That, being written at the height of the harvest of 1980, finds the 1979 Cabernet Sauvignon wines of both France and California still resting quietly in their oak barrels, as much as another 12 months away from bottling time. It'll be 1983 or 1984 before any of them will be making public debuts in tastings, and you may be sure that even then the kindest comments will be wrapped up with, "Needs more time to reach its peak."

In the preface to his letter, the physician referred to his interest in California wines, so we shall assume he is seeking a fine California Cabernet Sauvignon to commemorate the birth of his child.

FOR YEARS, it was almost a maxim that "Every year in California is a vintage year."

Certainly with our plentiful sunshine, most years are indeed vintage years in which some good wines are made. But Mother Nature never repeats herself, even in California wine country. Subtle variations do indeed exist.

We've even had some pretty rough years in the last decade, when untimely rains, the swooshing tails of tropical hurricanes, have drenched vineyards the length of the state, leaving wakes of rotting grapes on the vine. Usually we've had clearing skies and drying winds to avert that problem of bunch-rot, but not always. In 1972, from San Diego County to the famous North Coast regions of Napa and Sonoma, there were some problems; but in 1972 some wineries made some very outstanding wines!

No year in California to our knowledge has ever been a disaster year such as happens in every decade in European winelands. In Bordeaux, Burgundy and Champagne, right across the board, 1963 was a dud and 1968 was totally disappointing. As often happens in Bordeaux, there is no universal agreement as to the moment of harvest.

In 1973, at Chateau Giscours, the decision to harvest came before the rains. Other famous growths opted to harvest after the rains, and while a good drying wind came along, it made for a light, early-maturing claret. For 1979, it was a good year, short crop, but is being compared to 1967 for its roundness of virtues.

California Cabernet Sauvignon of 1979? For an authoritative estimate, we caught winemaker Tim Mondavi of the Robert Mondavi Winery in Oakville, giving him a brief recess from his chores with the 1980 harvest (which was "two weeks late to start, and two weeks early to finish"). Sugars were lower in 1979 than in the outstanding year of 1978. It will be a good, better than average year, with earlier drinkability.

WE REMEMBER that rains in the harvest period brought some bunch-rot to the Alexander Valley, but Michael Rowan of the Jordan Winery felt confident by July of this year that the Jordan 1979 would be a fine, complex and rich wine.

In Tim Mondavi's opinion, it would generally be a year of softer wines for California Cabernet Sauvignons. In the opinion of several winemakers, however, 1978 was the outstanding year.

Why not, one suggested, make that birthday of the heir a double-header, commemorating, in Chinese style, both conception (in 1978) and birth (in 1979), making it the best of both vintages!

To answer our correspondent's request about vineyards "getting the best reviews for tastings," years of observation, with a growing enhanced technology in our California vineyards and wineries, would make it little gamble to lay away almost any released Cabernet Sauvignon with the knowledge that, with proper cool and horizontal storage, 18 or 21 years would bring forth a wine of worthy charms, greatly improved in its fullness of bouquet and softness on the palate.

While we have a growing inventory of fine names for Cabernet, it is easy to list Beaulieu, Chateau Montelena, Fetzer, Freemark Abbey, Inglenook, Heitz, Jordan, Robert Mondavi, Ridge, Stag's Leap Wine Cellars and Sterling among pre-eminent producers of this wine.

Mayan world, Madrid at film series

The Lost World of the Maya and Madrid will be screened Thursday, Oct. 16 as the Sunset Cultural Center Brown Bag Cinema Series continues. Everyone is invited to bring a lunch at noon. The films will be shown at 1 p.m.

The Lost World of the Maya tells of the Mayan religious practices centered around human sacrifices to the sungod. Dr. Eric Thompson, noted Mayan authority, narrates the film.

Madrid, the second film in the series, features the capital of Spain. In Philip II's magnificent palace El Escorial, which the Spanish call the eighth wonder of the world, British TV personality Valerie Singleton recounts the history of Philip's attempt to regain control of England so he could return it to Catholic rule. The history of bullfighting is related and we also see the works of Diego Velasquez in the Prado Museum.

Sunset Center will provide coffee. On fair days, lunch will be enjoyed on the terrace and in case of rain, in the Chapman Room. The viewers will move to the Leonard Carpenter Hall for one hour of films.

The Brown Bag Cinema is an opportunity to revive an old-fashioned spirit of community, a chance to renew old friendships and a chance to make new ones.

Sunset Cultural Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel.

Admission is free and everyone is welcome to attend. For further information, phone 624-3996.

Library friends screen comedy Friday night

Friends of the Carmel Valley Library will screen the comedy Mr. Hulot's Holiday starring Jacques Tati and Nathalie Pascaud Friday, Oct. 17 at 7:30 p.m. at Carmel Valley Library, 65 W. Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and $1 for those under 12.

Everyone is invited to attend. For further information, phone 659-2909.

Music corner:

Orchestra boasts five new members

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

SPORTING A NEW SMOOTHNESS and lustre, the Monterey County Symphony under Haymo Taeuber opened its 35th season Sunday at King Hall in Monterey.

The playing of Gluck, Mozart and Beethoven was warm and generous, but not exciting.

What distinguished the orchestral tone from past seasons was, primarily, five new principal players. Leading the way with distinctive command and expertise was the Romanian-born concertmaster, Serban Rusu. Opposite him was the new first cellist, David Stein. Bradford Tozier is now leading the second violins, and the new principal bassist is Donald Nelson. The result was evident, for though there were a couple of sports of doubtful ensemble in the Beethoven Pastoral Symphony, the overall string sound was focused and directed. Further, it was rich and round. Other changes included a new first clarinet, Craig Olzenak, who sat second last year.

THE MOZART Piano Concerto No. 20 in D Minor, K. 466 enjoyed a finely made and temperamental creation by Horacio Gutierrez, a gifted keyboard master from Los Angeles (born in Cuba) who graced the Carmel Music Society several years ago.

His sparkling articulation and colorful tone spectrum was directed toward restless impulses and sometimes unexpected rubati and accelerations. His willful imagination challenged Taeuber, who quickly matched the pianist with phrase and tempo. The second movement, romance, was songful, thoughtful and individual in character, and its animated G Minor middle section stood in strong contrast.

Gutierrez gave dancing clarity to the Beethoven cadenza in the first movement. He chose the softer Casadesus cadenza for the rondo finale. In general, the performance was a kind of hybrid, using this dramatic element with that poetic one. But while it was beautifully played, it lacked an overall conception and the nourishment this work is famous for was of the salad bar variety.

The Beethoven Symphony No. 6 in F "Pastorale" was a mitigated pleasure. It was attractively realized, but allowed evidence of underpreparation. The woodwinds were on edge and resultantly a bit up-tight. Flutist Ray Fabrizio made the sturdiest sound and exhibited the greatest confidence; oboist David Seeley began with a particularly reedy tone and the others held back. The strings also appeared reticent and slightly inhibited, suffering occasional ensemble and attack problems.

Beyond those minor distractions was a friendly interpretation that vascillated between spring and summer. Taeuber chose a brisk tempo to "awake joyful impressions" and began the second movement with a fresh and breezy pace. The allegro opened with surprising speed. In each of those movements the opening freshness soon slowed to warm and sometimes heavy progression of sonorities. The step down from quick to slow was especially conspicuous in the allegro.

The storm in that movement was colorful but tame, and the finale was like a lazy afternoon complete with a golden haze.

The program opened with Wagner's concert arrangement of the Gluck overture, Iphiginia in Aulis. The piece is unable to conceal its two sources. Gluck's classical model is an excellent indicator that German nationalism in music is coming. But it is Wagner's orchestral vocabulary, if an early example, that is on display here. The piece was a well played concert event with full-bodied and confident effect.

The mystique of Agamemnon and the dramatic contrasts were referred to more than emphatically realized.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 97.

Theatre review:

A 'finely honed' performance

By MARC RIVETTE

THE STAFF PLAYERS Repertory Company kicks off a new season with The Servant of Two Masters by Carlo Goldoni, the Italian Moliere. He superseded the traditional commedia dell'arte, and became the father of modern Italian comedy. In this present play he still maintains the commedia dell'arte characters of Brighella, Truffaldino and Pantaleone.

His influence has been immense in opera, extending to Pagliacci, and even to Richard Strauss in Ariadne Auf Naxos. Puccini even set his The Accomplished Maid to music. But here we have him presented on his own two feet, without the help of music, and he stands very well.

The Staff Players Repertory Company has developed a way with the comedy buffo that is finely honed. The plot line of Servant of Two Masters is based on a lot of improbabilities. And that is half the fun.

A DEAD SUITOR for the hand of Clarice is impersonated by his sister, and aided and infinitely complicated by the servant. Everybody is confused, their lives disrupted, but everything comes out well in the end.

As the servant, Truffaldino, Thomas Sanchez has a beady eye for mischief and for his own profit. He gleefully makes the role his own, and makes the audience fall in love with him, exasperating though he may be. Raymond Roy does a fine job as Pantaleone, the father of the bride, so, too, does Alan Coppens as Dr. Lombardi, as the father of the aspirant groom. They play the ins and outs of their love-hate relationship with a sharp ardor, and it is a joy to see them verbally harangue each other.

Manuela Thiess does credit to the "pants" role of the dead brother, and her first despairing lapse into her feminine role of Beatrice was a block buster. John Brady, as Florindo, the lover who has killed Beatrice's brother, is handsomely virile and manages to hold his own even though surrounded by the more spectacular character roles.

The tradition of Goldoni's theater allows the characters to talk to the audience directly, thereby making it almost a family joke.

THE ONLY way to enjoy Goldoni is to come prepared for the preposterous. The audience was avid in its enjoyment of the convolutions of the plot. They indulged in the most satisfactory of laughs — those that come from the belly.

All in all, this is a fine evening in the theater. The pace is such that the chairs do not seem so hard this time. I, personally, would like to have seen a few more cuts, but the pace and the laughter are all there. Go prepared to enjoy yourself

One-man show by Maurice Harvey opens Saturday

CAPISTRANO MEMORIES by Maurice Harvey is one of the many Western scenes on display Saturday, Oct. 18 through Nov. 9 at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel. Everyone is invited to meet the artist Saturday, Oct. 18 from 4-7 p.m.

A one-man show of the work of Maurice Harvey will be on view Saturday, Oct. 18 through Nov. 9 at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel. Everyone is invited to attend a reception for the artist Saturday, Oct. 18 from 4-7 p.m.

The Western and English landscape scenes of the artist make this an exciting show of historical contrasts. Art historian Phyliss Barton writes: "Emerging as a major figure in American painting, Maurice Harvey is rediscovering the pungent natural beauty and historical significance of the Old West."

This presentation of his work was chosen as representative of the trend toward Contemporary Realism in American art. Originally from England and now making his home in California, the artist draws upon the finest techniques and traditions of the English masters in his many award-winning paintings.

Mr. Harvey is a graduate of Southend College of Art, England, and also attended the London College of Art.

The artist also taught painting and prepared a best-selling book, Landscape — Seascape on his special technique. He was associated with the film industry for many years and work in which he participated received the coveted Emmy Award. Included among his many awards and recognitions is the prestigious New York Art Directors Award for a series of old steam train paintings.

Among his numerous corporate and institutional purchasers are Fleur Corporation, Hanna-Barbara Productions, Monterey Savings and Loan, and hundreds of private collectors.

The gallery is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. For further information, phone 624-5071.

Reception at Zantman Galleries for brothers Gene and Loran Speck

The paintings of brothers Gene and Loran Speck will be on view Saturday, Oct. 18 through Nov. 8 at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue at Mission, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend a reception for the artists Saturday, Oct. 18 from 5-8 p.m.

Rarely since the days of the Old Masters do we encounter the precise technique and rich palette that Loran Speck so perfectly combines in his small still-life paintings.

Many contemporary artists emulate the trompe l'oeil studies of 15th through 19th century painters, but Loran Speck's work stands outs. He chooses the mellow rather than the brilliant as subject matter, and his paintings glow rather than sparkle. His subjects are often pewter and earthenware vessels in combination with the ripe, lush fruits and vegetables that appeal as much to our palate as they do to our eyes.

The artist was born in California in 1943, the son of a commercial artist who painted murals for government buildings. Though Loran appeared to have artistic talent at an early age, he was more interested in football, which earned him a scholarship to Oregon State University. After this, he enrolled at the Academy of Arts in San Francisco and soon thereafter was painting full time.

His work has shown steady improvement and has now attained a consistently flawless quality.

A sense of peace and quiet pervades the atmosphere of brother Gene Speck's paintings. His weathered farm buildings and Indian encampments set in vast, open terrain are rendered in gentle, earthy colors with brushwork of exquisite refinement.

Gene Speck was born in South Dakota in 1936 and moved with his family to California when he was nine years old. Though his recollections of the Great Plains stem from early childhood, he incorporates them, with a great feeling of authenticity, in his studies of Indian life as it must have been a century ago. His paintings of farm scenes, on the other hand, seem to reflect his present surroundings in Nevada.

Born into the artistic Speck family, Gene always enjoyed drawing and painting in watercolor but chose to work in the outdoors before pursuing an art career. In his early 30s, when his brother Loran had become a serious art student, Gene was encouraged by his family to return to painting. He began by painting small canvases, choosing subjects close to his heart: the outdoors, the Western scene, abandoned shacks and small farms in which people work and live.

The works of the Speck brothers may be viewed through Nov. 8, Mon.-Sat. from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For further information, phone 624-8314.

obituaries

R. Littlefield, bank president; at age 50

Robert C. Littlefield, 50, of Monterey, president of Monterey Savings & Loan Association, died Friday, Oct. 10, in Stanford Medical Center.

He had suffered a stroke Oct. 2.

He was named Citizen of the Year in 1977 by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Littlefield had been president of First Monterey Co.; vice president and managing officer of Monterey Public Parking Corp., president of Bessemer Oil Co., and a director of Rancho Canada de la Segunda Inc.

He was selected the 1979 Kiwanian of the Year by the 13 Kiwanis clubs of the Peninsula and Salinas.

He was born in Monterey.

He received an associate degree from Monterey Peninsula College, attended Stanford University and received a bachelor of arts degree from San Jose State University.

He leaves his wife, Patricia; a daughter, Susan, and stepson, John Hodgson.

Funeral services were held at United Methodist Church of Monterey.

Burial was in Monterey City Cemetery.

Clifton Beckwith

Clifton Henry Beckwith, 91, of Del Mesa Carmel in Carmel Valley, who was retired from Shell Oil Co., died Oct. 5 in Community Hospital.

He was born in New Brunswick, Canada. He was manager of the Shell Oil Co., tax department in San Francisco, and retired from the company in 1945.

He moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1953. He was a member of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Carmel.

He leaves his wife, Jane Fail Beckwith; a daughter, Paula Egan of Hillsborough; a son, Stanley B. of Belmont; and seven grandchildren.

Memorial services were conducted at Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove, with the Rev. David Hill of All Saints' Church officiating. Cremation was at the chapel. Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Community Hospital.

William Linton

William Morris Linton, 63, of Carmel, died Oct. 6 in Community Hospital.

Mr. Linton was born in Wichita, Kan. He came to Carmel four years ago from Westport, Conn., after his retirement as an executive for General Motors Corp., which he joined in 1941.

He held executive posts in the Union of South Africa, India, Venezuela, Brazil, England and Australia.

Mr. Linton leaves his wife, Barbara; a daughter, Suzanne, of Carmel; two sons, Robert and Charles, both of Carmel, and a brother, Charles of Carmel.

Private family services were planned. Inurnment will be in Wilson Cemetery, Wilson, Kan. Paul Mortuary is in charge of local arrangements.

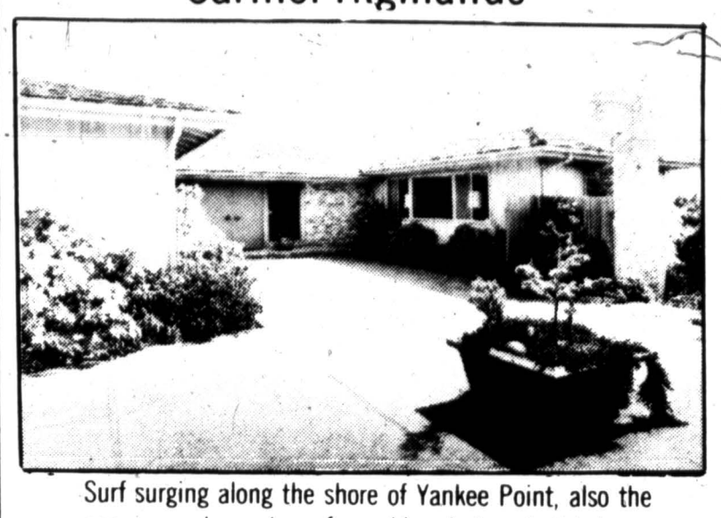
Carmel Highlands

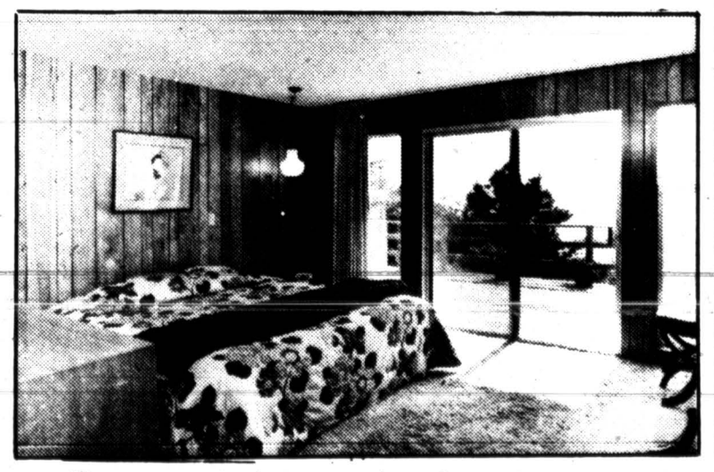


Surf surging along the shore of Yankee Point, also the open ocean beyond, are framed by windows in this home with path to a private beach below, exterior and shake roof of cedar, an expansive deck for outdoor pleasure.

In the living room are beamed ceiling, stone fireplace, a tile floor and the handsome pecan paneling enhancing almost all rooms of the entire, 2,208 sq. ft. interior.

Extending beyond the dining room is this tile-floored family room featuring sliding glass doors to the deck, a window wall for seeing sunsets and spouting whales.

Tiled walls and countertops, custom cabinets, built-in appliances distinguish the kitchen divided, by a brick barbecue, from the dining room with Franklin fireplace.



The master suite has ocean view, glass door access to the deck. Two more carpeted bedrooms, second bathroom, entry and sewing/laundry/utility area complete living space. In addition is a double garage with a workshop and genie door control. Other attractions of this high quality home are central vacuum and exterior lighting systems, parking court off a circular driveway leading past pines on the low-care-landscaped site—$495,000.

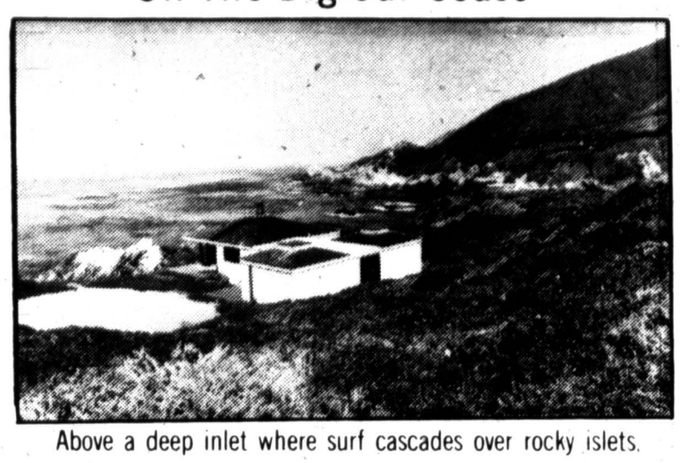
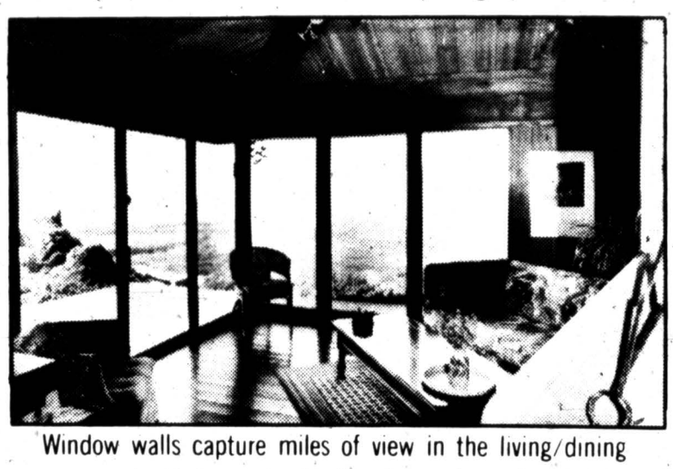
Hidden Home On The Big Sur Coast

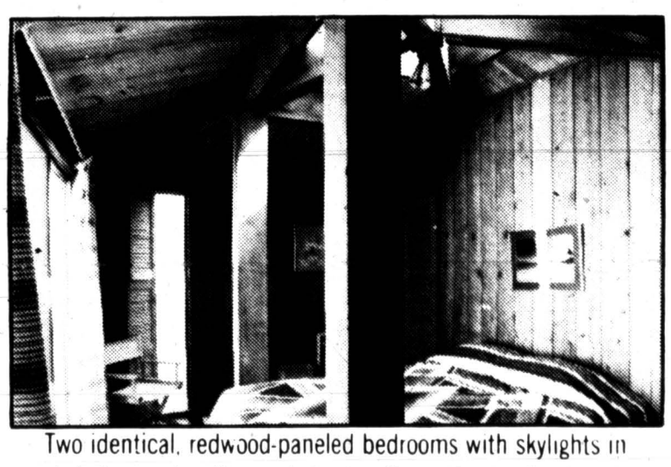


Above a deep inlet where surf cascades over rocky islets, also sheltered by hillsides abounding in wildflowers on a two-and-a-half-acre seafront site, this home with a cedar shingle roof and redwood exterior, features interior use of native woods in all rooms, each opening to a sundeck.

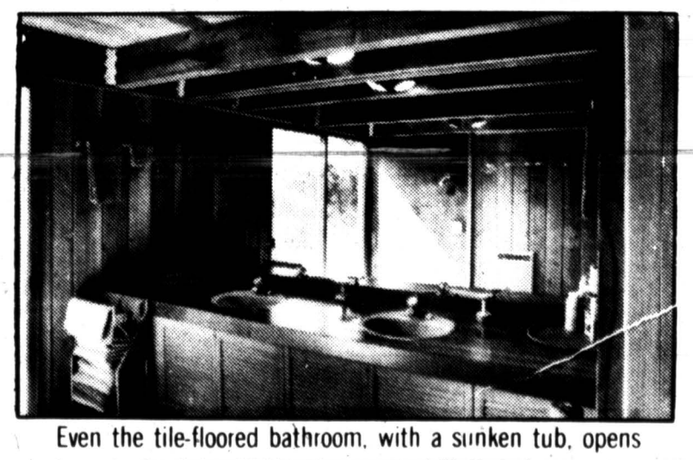


Window walls capture miles of view in the living/dining area centered by a circular fireplace, also enhanced by a beamed ceiling and paneling of redwood, a dark-stained pine floor and built-ins including a desk and bookcases.

The open plan living/dining area includes, too, a compact kitchen with a breakfast bar, carefully crafted cabinets and counters, stainless steel sink and an electric stove. A built-in refrigerator increases the kitchen efficiency.



Two identical, redwood-paneled bedrooms with skylights in their beamed ceilings, dark pine floors, huge closets and window walls opening to decks are in a wing connected to the main living area by a glass-walled entrance gallery.



Even the tile-floored bathroom, with a sunken tub, opens to a deck, also exhibits the same skilled craftsmanship of native woods enhancing the entire interior. The price of this shore-front home, hidden by hillsides, also with extensive and intimate Big Sur Coast views, is $510,000.

FRANK JOYCE, Carmel Valley dentist, is a top contender in the Trans-Am series race at Laguna Seca Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 18-19.

Dr. Frank Joyce: a tooth and nail approach to automobile racing

Carmel Valley dentist Frank C. Joyce may be the man to beat at the Trans-Am series Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 18-19.

As the curtain lap record holder, Joyce knows the quick way around the challenging Laguna Seca race course. He finished second here last year.

The 33-year-old driver, sponsored by Phantom Racing Corporation of Salinas, will debut a chassis PH-3 which he designed and engineered himself, along with fellow Carmel Valley resident John Kirshenbauer and race car notable Carroll Smith.

In 1978, Joyce was voted rookie of the year by Motor Sports Writers Association and finished third in the overall Trans-Am points standing with two wins and two track records. In 1979 he finished third in overall points standings with two wins and four track records.

Before 1968, the 6 foot 2 driver participated in a wide variety of racing events, beginning when he was only 16. It was his success racing in Trans-Am, IMSA and D/P racing events during the 1976-77 seasons that influenced his decision to go full force in the racing field.

He also flies airplanes, plays tennis, scuba dives, sails, lifts weights, jogs and rides his bicycle.

As for the future, the racer wants to organize a local effort to compete at Indianapolis 500.

"I am confident of my ability — the missing ingredient is sufficient sponsorship. A competitive effort for the Indy 500 would range from $250,000 to $300,000."

Somehow, it seems, he'll get it.

Woodstove workshop at Carmel High

Monterey Peninsula College will hold a free woodstove workshop from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 18, at Carmel High School, Room 2, Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Topics include an overview of wood resources, specifics on woodstove sizing and woodstove safety and maintenance.

Pre-registration is suggested, as there is limited enrollment. Bring a bag lunch. For more information, call 373-6668.
